I PENN SCHOOL HIGH D E

Your heart begins to skip a beat, your mouth goes dry, and you are overwhelmed with the thought that it is time to begin your high school career. You wander the hallways looking for answers, looking for a familiar face, because all you want to do is fit in. The halls that you walk through have seen many students before you that have experienced these similar emotions and fears. If only they could reveal to us what they have seen or heard in order to remember it forever. People want to know the secrets of the school that no one knows, the gossip and the rumors that groups of friends share, the discussions teachers have when students are out of earshot. Diving in and digging up the mysteries of our school is the highlight to what is going to make our high school experience unforgettable. We have taken it upon ourselves, as a yearbook staff, to reveal the findings of the hallways. Our job is to record every intimate detail, secret, and comment of the school year that never should be forgotten. Time may go on and leave memories behind, but our yearbook will forever hold the fondest years of our lives.

Fine arts and performances are a large part of the identity of Penn High School. We have many talented students, like chamber choir members, senior Becca Carpenter and junior Austin Pletcher, and theater stars like, juniors Kelsey Brown and Jenny Reber. These four students, along with many others, dedicated their time and energy every day to their activities. Our school's fine arts department is one of the areas that makes our students truly unique.

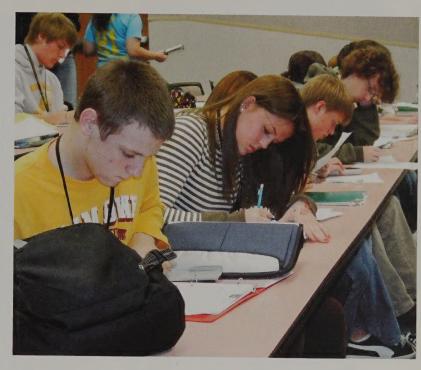

Freshman Misty Perez read to one of the numerous kids that attend the day care that the Child Development class provides. "Being a part of this class has influenced me to become a kindergarten teacher," she said.

One of the most memorable moments of the fall was when Purdue University graced Freed Field with a half time show during a football game. Purdue's band came to Penn High School because they were performing at the Notre Dame-Purdue football game the next day, and some of the Boilermakers' band members wereformer Marching Kingsmen.

All work and all play makes sophomore Allyson Knutson a very focused girl. Orchestra is a class that should be recognized for their amazing talent and hard work.

Study halls were a new addition to Penn High School this year. In past years, students attended homerooms, which had a smaller number of students in each class but functioned like a study hall. Andrew Parsons and Hannah Richards, pictured above, are two of the many freshmen in study halls and they believed that although "study hall is too crowded it is very helpful." Freshmen teachers worked hard to help ninth graders make the transition from middle school to high school.

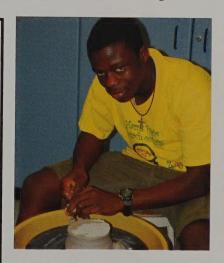

Every student at Penn tries to find his or her own identity, whether it is being a star basketball player like senior Caleb Laidig, an artist like sophomore Sam Blayee, a graceful dancer like junior Mariana Balaban, or just an enthusiastic fan like seniors Chris Rice and Adam Woodward. Despite the path a student chooses, they will always find great success at Penn High School.

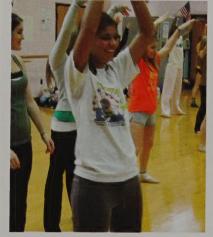

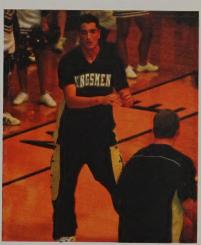

DID YOU KNOW... that several teachers were former students of this school? These teachers have seen and been through similar events that their students deal with today. Sarah (Meersman) Hickle, a graduate from 1997 and a U.S. History teacher, remarked that Penn had not changed since her graduation. She states that prom is still a major event of the year because, "You get dressed up, have dinner, and spend the evening dancing and having fun with your frie ds. What more could you ask for?" In high school Hickle involved in the drama, theatre program, and derpuff team. She continues her devotion to tball by being a powderpuff coach. When nt Yeoman, a student of the class of 1978 and -Calculus teacher, was interviewed he floated sweaters and overalls were the latest fashion. Yeoman was a part of the football, basketball, and track teams at Penn, and loved to be involved with as much as he could. He even was a member of the Model U.N. Jub. When asked about what important lesson he learned in high school that would benefit kids today he replied, "Invest your time wisely but get involved in as many things as you can. You have the rest of your life to work, so, if possible, delay trying to find a job while in high school."

Justine Grife, senior, peeked through part of a sculpture she made for AP studio art. April Simmon, junior, Kyle Strowinski, senior, Jenny Berrins, junior, and Jarod Plaia, sophomore, enjoyed the fruit of their labor in nutrition and wellness class. Every year National Honor Society sponsors a blood drive. Kristen Stevens, senior, Jessica Hall and Lizzie Snow, juniors, donated blood during the fall blood drive.

The hallway of every man's life is paced with pictures; pictures gay and pictures gloomy, all useful, for if we be wise, we can learn from them a richer and braver way to live.

Sean O'Casey, Irish playwright

...they'd tell us our story

The halls of Penn High School are filled with memories, from you, from me, and from those who have come before us. Every student's first experience here is a bit overwhelming. Often as freshmen we have been known to grumble about this huge building and the short seven minute passing periods. But some how we manage, and Penn changes from a gigantic maze to a familiar puzzle of secret stairwells, crammed hallway intersections, and planned meeting spots to catch up on how much life has changed in the 88 minutes we were apart from friends. This entire time our hallways have stood by as silent spectators of our high school years. These halls have no biased or prejudice what they see is what we get. They have seen us come early and sit with our friends long before the tardy bell rings, just so we get a good parking spot. They have kept watch as we've slammed lockers. complained about IDs and lunch detentions, and danced our way out the door into Spring Break. Penn's halls have caught it all--our good days and our bad days. It isn't just about you and me, it's about the girl four seats back in your algebra class, the guy who came in halfway through the semester in your English class, and the best friend from middle school who you said you'd never grow apart from--it's about each of us and our stories. So get ready because these halls are talking.

Penn's football team could not be successful without all the support and encouragement they get from the cheerleaders. Briena Davis and Maddi Hiatt, freshmen, rang the victory bell to cheer on the boys as they scored another touchdown. The Humanities and Guidance Division offices are known for their costume rivalry every Halloween. This year, to go along with the western theme in Guidance, Rachel Robb, junior, and Shane Eagan, sophomore, dressed up as an Indian and a cowboy horse and all). Penn's varsity volleyball team put lot of time into extra practice. Kelsey Labrum, Jessica D'Andrea, and Ali Beaudway, seniors, njoyed a moment of showing off for the camera as they practiced digging. Thesenior powderpuff team called in some favors and arrived for the night of the big game on a fire truck. Seniors Lauren Skowylas and Cassy Kaczynski loved every moment of attention that came along with the flashing lights. Orchestra teacher Lavon Oke helped Kiona Bass, junior, as she worked on the graphics for the orchestra poster.

Seniors Lindsey Dunlap, Lindsey Uland, Kate Emmert, Dua Turkmani, Kassi Beamer, Amy Coleman, and Andrea Campeau cheer on the Kingsmen football team on homecoming night.

P-E-N-N, Let's go, Penn!

Penn has been known for their huge and overpowering student section for decades. As we continue to maintain this reputation, our fans get more and more excited for each game of every year and our students can't help but stay loyal!!!

Mike Reed and Adam Woodward watch our Kingsmen with anticipation of another victory. It's always been tradition to have seniors in the front rows of the football games to pump up the crowd.

During homecoming, students rocked out with popped collars, lots of pink, and school colors in hopes for another NIC championship.

Penn freshmen showed their spirit by attending the exciting Friday night football games.

Seniors Amy Coleman and Andrea Campeau tailgated before the Mishawaka-Penngame. Mishawaka has been Penn's biggestrival since 1958.

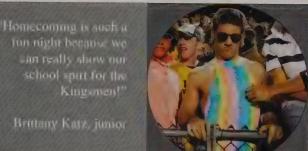

Seniors Taylor Dodds and Cory Barnett painted their whole bodies black and gold in assurance to crush the Cavemen.

Seniors Ted Rectanus and Chris Rice pregame for the Mishawaka vs Penn football game. They helped bring down the Cavemen that night.

Juniors Amber Bates, Kelsey Treely, Caitlyn Paulsen, and Brittany Katzrocked out our school colors and face paint.

Sam Tuthill, senior

Chris Rice, senior

Alex Pieri, senior

Fans begin to celebrate another touchdown by the Kingsmen by doing push-ups with senior Alan Reeder. The push-ups have been a Penn tradition for hard-core Kingsmen fans for a long time.

Senior Matt Toth, dressed as a pope, "blesses senior"

Amanda Bauer, senior, carried one large bag as a purse and the other as a book bag. When asked what all Bauer kept in her bags she replied, "It's great because I can keep everything in them. School books, iPod, anything you could think of that I might need during the day."

Now & Then Fashion

As decades pass, most are unaware of how fashion repeats itself; however, it is obvious that it already has. That leaves us with the question: What will come next?

Natalie Merced

Emily Treat wore a suede
blazer and clogs.
A blazer is a great fashion statement because it can be worn with blue jeans or with dress pants. Clogs may also be dressed up or down; plus, they're comfortable.
Senior Rachel Hill wore black gauchos, wedges, and i jean packet for a classy but dressy look. Gauchos can be worn with anything Either throw on a hoodle with them on a lazy day, or, like Rachel, mix them up with some heels and a cute shirt and you're ready for anything

Brittany Gwyther, junior, showed off her Ugg boots. These boots have made a promising name in the fashion business for years now. There was a rumor this year that they were going out of style but these comfy and convenient boots never will.

Junior Anthea McCormick wore an embroidery jean jacket. Jean jackets are a traditional fashion item that can be worn with anything. The patches add style and color.

Senior Kathryn Hosbein paused in the hallway for amoment while she entered the school. Hosbein wore a checkered tweed jacket to keep her warm, This was a look that has recently come back into style.

Mallory Hart, junior, wore pearls like many other girls in the last couple of years. Pearls were popular decades ago, and are now coming back in style. Princess Diana also wore pearls often for a classy look. Of course, this royal beauty's style and poise will always be remembered.

I wear high heels because I like them. Clothes don't define me_it's just something added on."

Nichole Fundora, junior

Jackie Kennedy

Twiggy

Princess Diana

Juniors Jeni Gregory, Rachel Malin, and Stephanie Majerek all wore fashionable headbands. Headbands were first designed just to keep hair out of your face but now girls wear them just as an accessory. They come in a variety of colors and patterns.

Senior Corrisa Hart wore plaid dress slacks and a tied sweater. Her look is sophisticated. Plaid is a pattern that will always be in style. Amanda Collins, senior, walked down the aisles of the store. She was ready for fun finds, sweet sales, and a great time at Goodwill. She hoped to find something bright and retro that would catch people's eye.

Christina Clark, senior, held up a Penn shirt, stuffed among other items. Goodwill's t-shirt section is like walking on a rainbow because t-shirts are organized by color.

Lauren Olson, 12

Wear it Well From Will

You don't need to find great fashion at the most expensive stores. Students proved this by spending time after school at local Goodwill stores to create inexpensive but fashionable outfits.

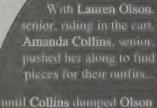

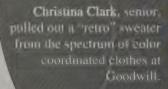

Amanda Collins, 12

until Collins dumped Olson out of the shopping cart.

Senior Christina Clark showed off her many outfits. "It's actually cute, and not that expensive either," Clark said.

Senior Amanda Miller laughed as Chad Pierce, senior, held up a lovely, white dress to himself. Looks good! Pierce needed the dress for a costume for his English project.

Lauren Olson, senior, grinned childishly at the overalls she found. "I'm not quite sure who'd have worn these before," Olson said.

Not only does Goodwill color coordinate their clothes, but their shoes as well. Lauren Olson searched for the perfect pair of white shoes to complete her outfit.

Seniors Lauren Olson and Amanda Collins proudly displayed their overalls and "jazz hands." "It was great to be silly and just laugh at ourselves," said Collins.

Alyssa Johnston, junior, modeled her clothing. The outfit, consisting of layered tanks, a blouse, sweater, and skirt cost just under $10 total.

Band BFF, last year's Battle of the Bands winners under the name of Botanical Bonzai, is made up of Troy Lauer, on the diggery do, Scott Verduin on the drums, Adam Weaver on the acoustic guitar, Brice Wozniak on the electric guitar, and Sam Tuthill on the flute. BFF was original in that they were known to whip out the violin and saxophone along with the infamous diggery do.

Now Playing

With the creation of study hall came the only block that teachers allow students to listen to music. Many students gratefully took advantage of this opportunity.

Courtney Healy, senior

Caitie Parten, sophomore, listened to The Format.

lut us listen to music to keep us gold! Otherwise it would be choos." Alicia Banicki, sophomore.

Senior Sarah Obreu stayod possitive dispute the mony arroundings in the cafeteria; "Music helps to scotte my nody and soul."

Innor: Lizzy Richards and Marcus Malters proudly hold up their thods Richards and, "It's kind of random, but I m running low on batters."

> Senior Brandon Miller saught up on current events while fistening to Marvin Gaye on his iPod.

Seniors Ryan McGrail and Robi Davidson with juniors David Witucki and Jimmy Zenger together form one of Davidson's three bands. Davidson said, "I want as much musical experience that I can get because I want to write music. Schedules may conflict, but I make it work as best I can."

Senior Brad Hills and junior Jimmy Chaszar, members of the Penn marching band, not only marched, but also played instruments outside of school. They just couldn't get enough band at school, so they created their own.

Seniors Kyle Murg, Michael Leslie, Mitch Wilcox, and Ryan Grashorn make up The Maharishis. The Maharishis were no strangers as students could often find them performing at Studeo 315 or competing in Battle of The Bands.

Secretaries Make Great Lovers knew how to rock hard and perform as they often found themselves exhausted at the end of a show. The band members include Lucas Zigler, junior, Connor Rohan, freshman, Bryan Corey, junior and Alec Healy, freshman.

Nick Winovich, 11

Lucas Zigler, 11

Seniors Andy Corporon and Josh Kelver played the guitar and mandolin respectively. It was not uncommon to see either senior toting their instrument through the bustling halls.

Senior Kevin Chupp, bass player for Solemn Promise, leaned and rocked with it while performing at the Skunk's Nest. Chupp and his band had big dreams and made it their goal to get a manager.

THE REAL DEATH

CLASS OF 2007

Seniors Blake VanDeVoorde, Alex North, Kyle Hakanen, Blair Hauflaire and Brandon Miller had some fun at lunch by keeping themselves entertained. The boys have all been really close since freshmen year and will miss goofing around at lunch next year.

Senior Steve Sirovica jumped through last year's robot. Sirovica has taken classes since freshman year so he could join the robotics team. "It has really prepared me for real life experiences and I'm glad I was able to be apart of the team camaraderie," Sirovica stated.

Senior Cara McGuin cheered on the Kingsmen football team while trying to keep warm on senior night. This was McGuin's last football season cheering for the Kingsmen. McGuin cheered all four years during her high school career.

Seniors Heidi Treacy, Rachel LeClere, Kristi Meng, Nicole Loeffelholz, and Lyndsey Tschetter took a break from their studying to smile for the camera. Spanish IV can be a tricky class so they needed all the time they could get to study the vocabulary.

Senior Joseph Marosz waited in foods and nutrition class for his soft pretzel to finish baking. He enjoys foods and nutrition because it will help him in the future when he is off at college and making his own meals.

Seniors Mike McKay, Alan Reeder, and Jason Wright showed off their togas. During homecoming week the seniors dressed up in togas and followed the great school tradition.

Seniors Alan Burger, Danny Williams, and Kyle Hilfman showed off their meat roll in foods and nutrition. "We like foods class because we get to eat the food that we made ourselves," Burger explained. At the end of every black day these three football players traded in their pads and uniforms for aprons and became great chefs!

Seniors Ashley Kalman and Shawn Machowiak stopped and smiled for the camera before going to class; "I thought high school would be hard, but I found out that trying to maintain a relationship in high school is even harder," Machowiak said.

ALMOST THERE

CLASS OF 2008

Kenny Haithcox looks off into space in sheer boredom. "Study hall can be boring if you don't bring any work to do," Haithcox commented. It's a smart choice for students to use their study hall wisely so they will have less work at home.

Chelsea Bishop worked hard in fitness class. Fitness class is a great opportunity for students to stay active especially if they are busy after school or can't find the time to work out. Fitness class offers many different opportunities from weights to endurance machines.

Emily Ehlers dances to the music in her dance class. "I look forward to the performance at the end of the year because I love to be on stage," Ehlers exclaimed. All dance classes put together a dance recital at the end of the year. The performance includes jazz, ballet, modern, tap, and theme dances.

Trent Matlock, Cody Sponseller, and Jimmy Brown took a break from cooking in their foods and nutrition class. Foods and Nutrition class teaches the students how to cook certain dishes and they even get to eat the dish after it's made.

Ben Piotrowski worked hard during his abdominal workout. Fitness class teaches the students to work out correctly and to stay active. I really enjoy this class because it gives me a chance to workout during school, Piotrowski stated.

Michelle Weaver worked on one of her sewing projects. Most students like sewing class because it gives them a chance to show their creative side.

Sarah Hutchings showed her exhaustion after finishing her girls' cross country meet. Hutchings has run the past four years and is looking forward to running her senior year.

Brittney Wickizer took a bite of her pretzel. That day during Foods and Nutritions class they made soft pretzels. One of the benefits of this class is that you get to eat your projects.

Corey McGann and Sean McFarland helped each other on a tough math problem. Study hall is a great time to get catch up on homework.

This didn't affect his love for the sport, though. "My doctor told me to stay out of the water for a week," he said, "but I was right back out there the next day." In addition to wakeboarding, Pecina started modeling for Starcraft boats last summer. "You just have to go for it," he said. "You can't be afraid of getting hurt because most tricks are hard. Don't be afraid to try things, even though you don't know what you're doing. Always think positively."

Ben Lawecki is among the younger members of the River City Rollers, a wheelchair basketball team founded in 1977. According to an interview in the South Bend Tribune, even though he joined the team less than a year ago, he has already noticed the benefits this team brings him. "It makes me feel better," said Lawecki of being able to play a sport, despite being in a wheelchair. "Everybody out here is great and it takes a lot of stress off me, especially from school, and it's just a great activity. It keeps me in shape and my basketball skills are definitely improving since I first started." Even though his future career ambitions will most likely lead him back to school to be a teacher, he admits that he will "definitely be playing basketball more." Lawecki is also in the Singing Kingsmen.

FLYING BY CLASS OF 2009

Ashley Watson laughed at a fellow classmate's joke as she continued to carve her vase in ceramics.

During child development, Kalya McKee put a Clifford puzzle together with her student while he shared his ideas of what he wanted to play next. Part of the fun of child development is learning to see the world through the imagination of a child. "It's a class that helps me practice what I will do when I'm a preschool teacher," said McKee.

While working quietly in the hall, Jared Sharkey asked his partner questions about Spanish vocabulary. Sharkey competes on the professional skiing circuit.

Soraya Saffouri kept busy by reading a book after she finished her painting project before it was due.

Chelsey Maldonado cut out fabric in sewing class, and commented on the class by saying, "It's a fun class and you get to make very neat things that you could actually use,"

Alli Folk concentrated on her AP Human Geography project using the IMC as a resource area to research information. Folk said this class took a lot of hard work and active participation in class to finish projects.

Brandon Drudge paid special attention to every detail as he worked on his sculpture. Making a mistake would have set him back and made finishing it on time nearly impossible.

In dance class, Kody Grantham and Sarah McGinnis both had fun reenacting a dance from 1910. They stared into the mirror to watch their moves and facial expressions while dancing.

Nick and Alex Hostetler, who are not related, worked together on their project in the IMC. They brainstormed and talked about how they wanted their project to turn out.

Getting a chance to travel the country and do a sport you love with some of the most famous athletes in that sport is a real honor. Sophomore Jared Sharkey has been water skiing for 13 years. He has been all over the world and trains with the number one ranked skier in the world during winter and summer breaks. Sharkey has competed since the age of eight and he is eight times state champion and two times regional champion. With the combined cost of the equipment and boat, this activity can become very expensive. Water skiers are also at risk for various injuries. Sharkey has broken a thumb, torn ligaments in his right leg, and crushed the bones in his right ankle. In the future, Sharkey plans to go pro.

Cheering in front of the student body at a football or basketball game can be a rush to cheerleaders. Only one thing can surpass this rush in the world of cheerleading, and that's cheering for thousands at a competition. Sophomore Olivia Rink has been a competitive cheerleader for the Indiana Cheer Elite (I.C.E.) for four years. Rink cheers for Penn and also has competed in over 30 competitions with I.C.E.. Her squad won first in nationals last year and she won the NCA All-American award at NCA camp. Rink was a gymnast for ten years before she became a cheerleader. Due to this, Rink can do some very difficult stunts. She is a flyer and can do a full heel stretch along with a full twist. However, all great athletes sometimes make mistakes. "During a competition, I knocked down the whole pyramid. It was so embarrassing," said Rink. Olivia plans on cheering in college, most likely in a southern school.

CHAPIER ONE

CLASS OF 2010

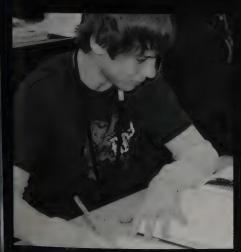

Katie Aiello worked calmly over her sewing machine in Fashion & Textiles. I really like sewing class, "said Aiello. I can come to class and just do my own thing at my own pace."

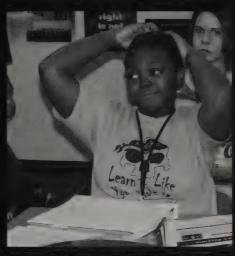

Tiffany Stanfield and Caitlyn Rough worked on a project in Belinda Dalke's biology class. I like the lab because we don't have to sit in the classroom, and now we can talk, "said Rough.

Study hall is one of the many benefits Dylan Beckham looked forward to coming into freshman year. Freshman year is easier than you think, "Beckham said, And I like having four classes a day instead of eight."

Belinda Dalke's biology class is popular among freshman because of the group work involved. I like this class, it is my favorite," said Cynthia Chijioke."The students worked on projects such as evolution timelines and DNA models.

Haley Campeau and Jillian Haney worked on their rugby skills in Lisa Bottorff's PE class. I like it better than middle school gym because we do more than the same five sports over and over again, "said Campeau.

Kelly Cole enjoyed one of the many activities during a Freshman Mentor session. Its pretty cool to be able to hang out with the older kids and hear their stories," said Cole. They give us advice for making it through high school."

Eric Hess strapped up his skates in Dean Foster's physical education class. Foster is the best teacher ever, "laughed Hess, but I didn't like the skating, I fell like twenty times."

Junior Paul Azzi led a group in a teamwork activity during a Freshman Mentor session. The objective was to grab hands and get tangled together, explained Azzi. Then we had to work together to untangle ourselves.*

Princess

Many girls dream of becoming a princess. Freshmen Hannah Richards has achieved her goal of winning the crown as the 4H Fair princess. She has been involved with the fair for eight years and has competed in events such as modeling dresses she has made, and creating paintings and memory books placing very well. The whole Richards family is involved in 4H and she describes it as a great bonding experience. "My mom helps me a lot in my projects and my dad helps my sisters with their woodworking. It's really a fun bonding experience," said Richards. She has also created many friendships within the fair. To win the title of 4H princess, one must participate in a interview with the judges. The judges found Richards very confident and cheerful so they chose her. Since being crowned, she has helped out the community a lot. Richards has traveled to schools to persuade others to take part in the 4H tradition, participated in many parades, and she also will help judge for the next 4H princess.

BRAUBBI TEACHERS

When senior Mike Zuidema had a question about government, Lori Pettine used her wonderful teaching techniques to help him understand the material.

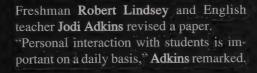

Physical Education teacher and head boys' basketball coach Dean Foster coached freshman Billy Bartek while he lifted weights. It's always good to have a spotter nearby to help lift the weight if it gets too heavy.

Senior Calvin Uselton illustrated a scene from a poem as English teacher Janet K. Kelley watched over him. This was Kelley's second year teaching at Penn.

Senior Blain Frick, Spanish teacher Becky Lutkus, and junior Brittnie Smallwood reflect on the Day of Dead in their third year Spanish class.

Math teacher Trent Yeoman helped junior Charles Barnes on a tough algebra II problem. "I enjoy math because I get to expand my knowledge working on problems that will help in the near future" stated Barnes.

Senior Alex Pieri had Shelley Wilhelm for biology as a freshman and now as a senior she continues to be one of his favorite teachers. Wilhelm, like Yeoman and Holmes and many other teachers, is a Penn grad.

Computer programing teacher Rod Anadon helped sophomore Ian Jacob with some programing language. The class is a lot of fun, but there is a lot of work involved.

ACHIVINIES

OUR TIME. OUR HEARTS
OUR BEST

Peer leadership students Theresa Milbourn and Kristi Meng, seniors, helped Kelsey Ray wrap presents. The peer leaders spent a morning at the mall helping their students purchase gifts for the holidays.

Penn's publication classes are known for producing great results. McKenzie Sanders, senior, a Spectrum editor, worked on a writing prompt at the beginning of class.

The senior defense posed for one last picture before they took the field against the junior team. Defense came together with great team chemistry at practice, and had fun for their senior season of Powderpuff.

The juniors huddled up before the big game against the seniors. With no expectation to win, they pulled it off with surprise. This was a victory that will never be forgotten.

Senior Kara Fick hugged the ball tight as she jerked her way up the field. Fick played safety and she was also on kick-off-return.

Meghan Coughlin, senior, showed her speed while she broke away from a sophomore player. Coughlin strutted down the side line in hopes of making a touchdown.

Both members of opposing teams, senior Ashley Szklarek and sophomore Stephanie Oates, ran near each other as they made their way down the field. As Oates inched closer to Szklarek her only thoughts were stealing her flag.

The junior team members held hands to show their unity during a suspenseful time of the game. It wasn't exactly talent that helped them win, it was the heart they had willing to accomplish the long goal.

"Powderpuffbrings out the extreme intensity in girls that most people have never seen before except on Freed Field."

Lauren Patterson, senior

"It was my third year playing and definitely the most exciting; we were known as the underdogs but we came out on top."

Leah Schneider, Cristina Wiltse and Andrea Campeau, juniors

"The sophomores really need a lot of work for next year, it showed in our game. We had a lot of fundoing it."

Alyssa Haithcox, sophomore

Guts and Glitter

The senior girls put together the best entrance in Penn history, rolling in on top of a fire truck. Each girl sang the traditional "S-e-n-i-o-r" chant until their throats burned, as onlooking underclassmen watched in awe and became pumped for the oncoming games.

Katie Lamb, junior, grabbed out in hope of capturing the flag of the opposing team member, Natalie Obren, freshman. Lamb played a big role in the games racking up plenty of flags and helping the defense seal the deal over the teams they played.

Prior to the snap of the ball, the junior defensive line gathered up across from the freshmen offensive line. Even though the juniors had "juniority" over the freshmen, the freshmen players gave them a good fight and one to be proud of.

Sophomore quarterback Kelsey Reynolds rolled out looking for her go to girl. Reynolds contributed to her team in many ways such as using her speed to break away from the opposing team which helped her throw accurately to her team.

The freshmen offensive line felt the pressure as they got into position to take on the junior team. The freshmen team was impressive scoring in the first few minutes of the game. This was a strong team that may become a threat in their future years of playing Powderpuff.

"Powderpuff was the best experience I've had so far in high school. It was a good way to meet other freshmen before the school year started. I'm looking forward to playing it next year."

Natalie Obren, freshman

"Here at Penn, powderpuff is all about tradition. This year we made it a memory."

Erin Shay, junior

"Justwhen I thought we couldn't do anything dumber we went and pulled something like this and lost to the juniors."

Sarah McNerny and Cassy Kaczynski, seniors Senior Aleece Weade beamed at the crowd as she was crowned homecoming queen. Weade sang for the first lady at the Century Center in October. She is very involved in school activities including student council, National Honor Society, and is a member of the chamber choir.

Danny Williams, senior, participated in dressing up for mismatch day. "This is how I dress on weekends so it was real easy for me to come up with a great outfit!" Williams stated.

Sophomore Amanda West showed off her suspenders. On this day of homecoming week the underclassmen dressed up as nerds.

Seniors Corissa Hart, Kylie Reynolds, and Kelesy Whittaker smiled big and showed off their togas for homecoming week. Seniors have a tradition of getting together with friends and making togas.

Junior Braxton Cave showed off his quarterback skills and represented his Grissom Guardsmen Middle School football jersey. Cave has played football here at Penn for the past three years and plans on playing his senior year.

Kyle Klockow, freshman, isn't distracted by his jersey as he works hard in class. "My favorite thing about homecoming was seeing all the different outfits," Klockow stated. This is his first year participating in spirit week, and he looks forward to participating in the future.

Senior homecoming king Mike Shidler escorted Megan Willkom on to the track at Freed Field during half time at the homecoming game. Shidler is a member of the rugby team and Willkom has been cheering for the Kingsmen for four years.

Sophomores Ashley Lolmaugh, Karla Seider, and Dena Dobrzykowski showed off their favorite NFL football teams. The Saints, Bears, and Colts are three favorite teams in this area.

Spirit: Fear It

Mike Shidler, Megan Willkom, Clint Miller, Aleece Weade, Brandon Miller, Alexis Valdez, Wes McGinnis, Ally Holland, David Coleman, and Ashley Fuchs made up the 2006 homecoming court. The senior class nominated these five couples by voting during study hall.

Seniors Alex North, Blake VanDeVoorde, Peter Vavul, and Kyle Hakanen posed for the camera on jersey day. This year the senior class had a lot of enthusiasm when it came to school spirit.

Seror Sara Harker stiff armed junior Seth Hill n rsey day during the week of homecoming. "I walso excited for spirit week because I got to we my brother's Purdue jersey. That day was unt lievable," Hill said.

Senior twins Peter and Andy Vavul dressed up for mismatch day. During homecoming week it was visible the twins had Penn Pride because they participated in all the homecoming days and they showed great school spirit.

Junior Sara Hayden and senior Christine Cummings performed nerd-like actions for one of the homecoming days. "I didn't dress up in a toga because I didn't feel like a senior yet. I thought it would be fun to dress up as a nerd," Cummings remarked.

Jason Wright, senior, wore head to toe football equipment on jersey day. "Spirit week is a fun opportunity to show Penn Pride," Wright said. Wright always is thinking of unique ways to show his school spirit.

Juniors Paul Azzi and Troy Brinker took a break from the homecoming dance and got some punch. "I enjoyed the dance. We had a really good turn out this year," Brinker said.

Senior Brandon Miller smiled for the camera while being recognized as an escort for the 2006 homecoming court. "It was a great experience and was a tremendous honor to be nominated," Miller exclaimed.

Seniors Ruby Parikh, Miel Sundararajan, Jennifer Shook and David Coleman got down on the dance floor.

Brothers Conor O'Toole, senior, and Colin O'Toole, sophomore, went in the same group with dates Lindsey Bennett and Lauren Brown, juniors. "The best part of the night is the dancing," said Brown.

Junior Kyle
Overstreet danced with sophomore date, Bethel

City Lights

Many seniors decided to try a more casual evening than most years. This group of girls all went together without dates and met up with a group of senior guys at the dance.

MacKenzie Austgen and Allie VanHyfte, both juniors, with sophomore Stephanie Banas spent the night enjoying the dance with a large group of friends.

Junior Dana Stevens with senior date, Greg McGowan, spent an unforgettable night together. Snowball is one of the high school memories that will last a lifetime, and it's even more memorable when it's spent with someone special.

Ben Koenig, junior, tries to calm Sarah Obren, senior, his on-stage wife, through her delivery. Obren drew inspiration from Kirstie Alley in the movie Look Who's Talking.

Seth Umbaugh, sophomore, fainted after his fiance Anna Barncord, junior, found out he had an affair with Kara Weaver, senior. Weaver had to wear a fat suit for her role as oblivious, obese Dolly.

Bill, played by Jay Hancock, junior, and Betty, played by Natalie MacRae, senior, enter their final stance in the play Sure Thing. Hancock and MacRae had to focus on their lines and characters for this complex play.

Jenny Reber, Trent Anthony, Kelsey Brown and Shane Miller, all juniors, acted in the play Apres Opera. Anthony and Brown provided comedic relief as a narcoleptic and a waitress with a biting sense of humor from the tension between exes Reber and Miller.

Julie Bradford and Amanda Urban, both juniors, played Claire Madison and Regina King. The two characters were the stereotypical beauty and the geek in high school, but reunited 15 years later to find that high school pains don't last forever, and popularity doesn't always count in the real world.

Director's Cut...

"As an actor, you think you have most of the work, but as a director you realize you have as much, if not more."

Lucas Miner, junior

"It was an eye opening experience. I never realized how much work standing in the director's shoes could be."

Alix Wiggs, senior

"I would recommend directing to actors who have never done it before."

David Coleman, senior

Fifteen Minutes of Fame

Kyle Kuhlman, sophomore, and Callie Lorenz, junior, hit their marks in their hip-hop dance routine. The intensity of their performance was appreciated by the crowd and helped them take the second place title.

Junior Gordon Sill was the first place winner of the evening for displaying his incredible talents of singing and playing the piano. Sill performed with his bandmates of Broken Strings at two different times and also impressed the audience with an original instrumental and vocal.

Senior Lyndsey Tcshetter played the guitar as she sang an original song, "The Search." Coshetter also sang a reprise of "Killing Me Softly," a crowd favorite featured in last year's alent show, and was again successful as she was one of three winners of the night.

Laureen Foulks, senior, wowed the crowd with her impressive baton twirling. Foulks' performance was intense as she danced to the emotional "Call Me When You're Sober."

Amber Weaver, freshman, captivated the audience with her fluid motions and water-like movement. Her extraordinary talent in ribbon dancing was a pleasant surprise for the audience. Her act was a breath of fresh air as her performance was unlike any other of the evening.

Show off that talent you got...

"Hosting the talent show was a lot of fun! I got to do a dance in the beginning, too. I was the stuff!"

Cha'Vez Williams, senior

"I enjoyed the stage presence and stepping out of my comfort zone. I plan on singing in the future and I think the talent show was a big step."

Becky Breske, junior

"The talent show isn't about the competition; it's about doing what you love, and I love to make people laugh."

Justin Glennon, junior

Senior Lyndsey Tschetter serenaded the prom king and queen by singing "At Last" by Etta James.

Seniors Danielle Budd and Blain Frick shared a dance after being crowned prom king and queen. The couple was nominated and chosen by the class of 2007. This was really exciting for the couple since they have been dating throughout high school.

Seniors Phillip Johnson and Becky Klimek began the evening off with a slow dance. Also, Johnson, a member of Penn's band, entertained his friends with some of his hidden dance moves.

Seniors Caleb Laidig and Ali Beaudway walked arm in arm towards the dance floor. The two were excited to spend their last prom together. They were also nominated for prom king and queen.

A group of Penn students waited to check in before they headed into the prom. The check-in table was run by several of Penn's staff members who were excited to see their students dressed up.

Juniors Anna Winterhalter and Jose Zepeda took a break from fast dancing and held one another while they slow danced.

Dillon Gonderman and Sarah Obren waited to hear the results of king and queen. Century Center in downtown South Bend was the prom site.

Junior Alyssa Johnston enjoyed her first prom and looks forward to experiencing it again.

Time of Your Life

Many students stood and watched the crowning of the royal court. Seniors Danielle Budd, Blain Frick, Dillion Gonderman, Sarah Obren, Ali Beaudway, Caleb Ladig, Ali DenOtter, Adam Marsh, Emily Riggs, and Steve Spiritoso made up the 2007 prom court.

Austin Shafer and his date walked into the dance and admired the many decorations that were set up by the junior class. The juniors hosted the prom for the seniors. The entrance way alone took hours to erect.

Juniors Chelsea Bishop and Christian Haithcox danced to the newest hip hop and rock music.

Cha'vez Williams crowned Sarah Obren as prom princess. This year, with the absence of homeroom, seniors voted for prom king and queen in their English class.

Kayla Thompson and Bob Wotring, seniors, gazed into one another's eyes as they danced. The couple ate dinner at Doc Pierce's and took pictures along the East Race.

Ali DenOtter and Adam Marsh waited for the crowning of king and queen. Prom was the same weekend as Notre Dame's graduation, and restaurant reservations were at a premium.

Senior Ashley Coe and her date danced the night away.

Junior Chase Elder held Alese McDonald closely after enjoying a night with her that will never be forgotten.

Kayla Wisler beams as she accepts a scholarship from Superintendent Jerry Thacker and his wife, Donna. Wisler will attend Purdue.

Sean Donigan, who will attend the Kelley School of Business at Indiana University, received the Principal's Citizenship and Service Award from Dr. Dave Tydgat.

Nate Freeman accepted the Howard and Ruth Hensler Scholarship and the Madison Township Lion's Club Scholarship. Freeman also helped Grangergirlfriend Emily Riggs raise piglets for the 4H Fair.

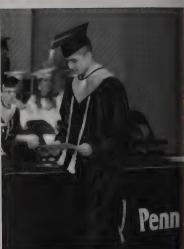

Xiang Xu won both the Purdue Incentive and Educational Opportunity Awards, along with four others. His twin, Yu, won the Dale Whitehead Music Scholarship to Indiana University and four other awards also.

Star Kincaid stands as she is recognized for the YWCA Tribute to Women award. She also won the Starfish "You Make a Difference" award.

Gautham Vaidyanathan was voted Kingsman of the Year by his classmates, who rose to give him a standing ovation. He will attend Northwestern.

Seniors earn over four million in scholarships and awards

Katie Sperry accepted the US Marine Corps Semper Fidelis Award and the Saint Mary's College Presidential Scholarship.

Sarah Horn won the Bittersweet Elementary PTO Scholarship, Penn High Booster Club Scholarship, and the WoHeLo Campfire Award.

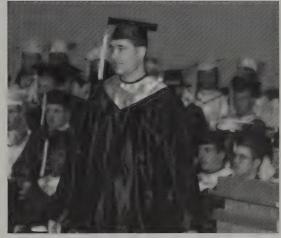

In addition to winning PHS Choir Booster and Educational Service Personnel Scholarships, Chelsea Zimmerman won the Dr. Franklin Miles Science and the IUPUI Women in Science Scholarships.

Honoring Achievement and Success

The Class of 2007 wore gold hoods and cords to signify Academic Honors, red cords for being a Freshman Mentor, and other colors of tassels to indicate achievements.

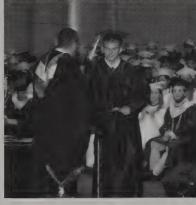

Chris Klein accepted the Osceola Business Association Scholarship from School Board Member Randy Leilart.

Wabash-bound Adam Auter earned several honors, including the US Marine Corps Scholastic Excellence Award, three scholarships from Wabash for baseball and academics, and Penn's Spanish and business department medals.

The Mishawaka Optimist Club and WNDU recognized Robert Campbell for his positive mental attitude and perseverances in the face of adversity.

Reatta Hunter was honored at the YWCA Tribute to Women annual banquet and celebration. Hunter participated in the Elkhart Area Career Center cosmetology program.

Tornados and severe weather threaten Senior Rec night

Thom Andreae congratulated Marissa Ribot on receiving the medal for the Outstanding Artist of AP Studio Art. Ribot will attend the Illinois Institute of Art in Schaumburg.

Chris Cummins won the Penn High School Building Trades Scholarship. Cummins helped build the class's $185,000 house.

Miel Sundararajan, one of only 41 Presidential Scholars in the United States, was chosen the Schmucker Award winner by the faculty. She will attend Rice University in Houston, from which she won several scholarships.

Junior Seher Chowhan prepared a banner in November to promote Mix-it-Up Day. Mix-it-Up Day was a national event where cafeteria seating was rearranged to promote meeting new people and breaking down barriers.

Junior Elissa Gennicks checked the clothes donations to Goodwill. Christine Wu, sophomore, organized the drive to help the severely depleted stores.

Junior Paul Azzi worked with administration to regain privileges for seniors to use the courtyard during lunch.

Sophomore LeeAnn Kuehn painted a sign to advertise the B.O.B. Winners of the battle received $200 gift certificates from the Guitar Center.

Junior Lauren Sweeney decorated a sign for Battle-of-the-Bands. B.O.B. showcased six bands in a high quality show for 300 attendees.

Student council members sold t-shirts at B.O.B. in March. With the proceeds, they staffed the "Angel Cabinet" in the Guidance office. The cabinet has personal care items and school supplies for Penn students in need of assistance.

Speaking their minds...

Junior Patrick
Hess checks t-shirt order forms for BOB. Hess was always in charge of t-shirt sales and worked with Paiges to check for ordering flaws.

Sophomore Alex Gabrielli showed her excitement at finding a heart during the Valentine's Day scavenger hunt. Since February 14 was a snow day, the hunt took place the next day.

"I joined Student Council because I love the people involved. I also love making decisions and helping others. My favorite event this year was when I cochaired the Homecoming Dance."

Kayla Wisler, senior

Making a Difference

Junior Elissa Gennicks, Esther Che, sophomore Madhura Sundararajan prepared the cafeteria for the Battle of the Bands. Student Council does a lot of behind the scenes work that many don't know about.

One of the Student Council junior class projects every year is Mix It Up Day. This day, sponsored by the Southern Poverty Law Center, promotes respect for diversity.

Juniors Linda Huang and Annsa Huang hid a heart on Valentine's Day. Student Council sponsored a Valentine's Day scavenger hunt and those who found hearts were rewarded with prizes like movie passes and gas cards.

A group of students stayed after school on March 16 to move tables and set the stage for the annual Battle of the Bands competition that recognizes new and outstanding talent.

Sophomore Alli Folk painted a poster to advertise Battle of the Bands. Folk designed a survey to find out how Student Council could improve. The survey was a project for her AP Statistics course, and involved analyzing the data from hundreds of surveys.

... and helping others

"I chose to be part of the PA radio show because I wanted to communicate news events to the student body."

Kelsey Donigan, sophomore

"My favorite project is student surveys about issues such homeroom and lunch lines. We will then give these to Mr. Hope in hopes of changes for our school."

Madhura Sundararajan, sophomore

Junior Ruvi Chauhan was an active member of the Student Council and has been since her freshman vear.

Junior Nichole Fundora delivered messages on International Women's Day. Each Penn female received a personalized note from POW.

Seniors Elizabeth McKenzie and Becky Reising collected paper from the Writing Center. The NHS committee took materials home to recycle since no company comes to Penn for this.

Sophomore Sean Bridges baked cookies for the homeless for Key Club. Each week, members delivered dozens of cookies to the Center in South Bend.

"When women come together in one place a powerful energy is created." Leeann Kuehn, sophomore, held envelopes filled with cards bearing this message to be distributed to all Penn females on March 8 during block 1

"From the speakers to the discussion to the dancing, POW has made it clear what it means to be a woman in today's society--recognizing your inner strength to make a difference," said Heba Abdel-Latief, junior, flexing her muscles with other members.

Abby Walton, junior, gave some extra attention to Pet Refuge favorite, Zoe, Walton volunteered as a cleaner at Pet Refuge on Saturdays through Key Club.

Taking Initiative . . .

"Girls tend to have so much drama amongst themselves, so I wanted to do something that would help tie us all together and remind us that as young women we have powerful potential to make a difference.'

Ashley Davison, senior

"POW brought girls together in an environment where they knew they could be themselves and learn how to encourage others to be the same way in everyday life."

Bridget Dix, senior

"Recycling was an important project that benefitted both the commuthe nity and school."

Christine Cumming senior

Community-Wide Kingsmen

Members of Key Club met after school to plan service events, such as a school supply drive. This is the first year of Penn's branch of the youth service club, which is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and Ree Johnson.

Students in Shelly Wilhelm's honors biology class collected donations for the Salvation Army. During the holidays, Wilhelm's class worked with Belinda Dalke's Black 2 class and collected a truck full of toys for the needy.

Football players worked on their hands and knees laying quarters for the Silver Mile. The corporation-wide event raised money for teacher grants and promoted health awareness. Each row of quarters equalled $6.25.

Janey Smith, junior, made a point about revealing too much personal information on My Space during a presentation by the High Tech Crimes unit of the Prosecutors' Office.

Penn cheerleaders posed with Donna Thacker, a PHM foundation representative (and the Superintendent's wife), at the Silver Mile. Students painted children's faces and performed for the community-wide event. The row of quarters stretched down the art hallway.

... and Raising Awareness

"The Silver Mile was a great opportunity to bring all of PHM together to raise money and also have a lot of fun."

Joe Mwamba, sophomore

"With no more Interact, Key Club connected Penn to the community. It is open to everyone who wants to make a difference."

Julie Bradford, junior

"The best part of the Silver Mile was learning all about health issues and trying new things at all the different booths."

Tom Fryska, junior

Erik Hudak, senior, explained math problems for his little. Big Brothers and Sisters are careful not to do their little's work, but try to help all they can.

What better way to learn to love words than Scrabble? Junior Aaron Kiraly paused to think while his little crossed his fingers for a win.

"You're doing great!" senior Emily Wolverton praised her little. Big Brothers and Sisters offer all the help and fun of an older sibling without all the stress.

Lindsey Collier, junior, looked on as her little completed his work. Collier took her work as a Big Sister seriously, encouraging and praising her little.

Organization is one step in staying on top of things, but it's an important one! Senior Katie Sperry had a chance to have a good talk with her little while they cleaned out her little's tote.

What do you think about...

"It's fun to help the kids that need a boost. We get to hang out with them and just have fun."

Ryan Jones, junior

"It's a really rewarding experience because you see how you're helping your little. You see the direct results."

Lindsey Collier, junior

"I thought being a big sister would be a great opportunity to work with kids, and I really enjoy doing it."

Katie Fisher, junior

Big Hearts, Big Smiles

Sarah McGinnis, junior, quizzed her little to prepare him for his multiplication test. Big Brothers and Sisters spend time each week helping their littles with grades and social interaction.

Kristin Buhr, senior, guided her little through the last of her math before they chose a game to play. "I really enjoyed watching my little open up and become more comfortable with me," Buhr said enthusiastically.

Who says coloring is just for kids? Junior Holly Tavares and her little got creative with their crayons after finishing their work.

A challenging game of Sorry was the perfect way for Ryan Barnum to wrap up the day with his little. "We always end up playing a game," he explained. "We remember the fun stuff."

It's not all work for the Big Brothers and Sisters at Bittersweet. The littles of Lindsey Collier, junior, and Ryan Barnum, junior, challenged them to a game of Trouble.

...being a big brother or sister?

"I had fun working with the kids. I worked with kindergartners, so it was always fun, not stressful."

Stephanie Maggart, sophomore

"Iloved being able to interact with the kids and help with their problems. It's a great way to volunteer."

Daniel Howard, sophomore

"These kids really look up to you. I feel like a superhero."

Alan Reeder, senior

Ruby Parikh, senior, and Paul Azzi, junior, shook hands at the induction ceremony. There were over fifty new inductees in the fall of 2006.

Hannah Che, senior, Kelly Saha, junior, and Thomas Fryska, junior, posed with Santa at the Center for History before the children arrived to eat their breakfast and enjoy Santa's company.

Ben Fuja, junior, gracefully accepted his place into the National Honor Society as he shook NHS president Miel Sundararajan's hand. The officers were just as excited as the new inductees to start off the year.

Becky Reising, senior, helped construct decorations after school for Snowball, the Penn winter dance. The theme for this year was "City Lights." Reising also collected recycling as service.

Miel Sundararajan, senior, and Patrick Hess, junior, assisted in the biannual NHS Blood Drive while senior Ruby Parikh visited them during Senior Toga Day.

Deborah Wei, senior, tutored Vik Rao, senior, in Calculus outside of the cafeteria, NHS members assisted their peers during their study hall in various academic subjects.

Character, Scholarship. . .

"I joined NHS because I wanted to get more involved in the community."

Christine Kim, senior

Seniors Kristi Meng and Michael Jordan put together a building to complete the "City Lights" theme of the annual winter dance.

Alison Denotter, senior, devoted her time to helping her peers understand academic material and also enjoyed contributing to the larger community. She said, "I love working at places outside of school, like the ZooBoo and Stuff-abus."

Commitment, Honor, Prestige

During the NHS induction ceremony, vice president Neill Li, senior, called the new members to the stage. Miel Sundararajan, Peggy Chang, Eunice Ikene and Ruby Parikh, seniors, congratulated junior Seher Chowhan on her acceptance into the prestigious society.

Adam Lamm, senior, and Andrew Gresik and Kevin Goldsmith, juniors, participated in the Candy Gram fundraiser. All proceeds went to NHS to help fund future projects.

Jason Wright and Morgan Malone, seniors, posed pensively for the camera while tutoring during study hall.

Kevin Goldsmith, junior, was new to Penn High School and was welcomed by his peers through NHS. When asked about how being in NHS affected his experience at Penn, Goldsmith explained, "NHS helped me to meet new people!"

Rocio Miramontes, junior, assisted at the Breakfast with Santa event at the Center for History. Miramontes admired a paper doll ornament hanging from the Christmas tree.

...Leadership, Service

"NHS helped me to focus my awareness on the surrounding community in a thoroughly enjoyable fashion!"

Jenny DeVito, senior

"I love being involved with the community and NHS provides me with even more opportunities."

Kara Weaver, senior

When asked what she has gained from being in NHS, Annsa Huang, junior, said, "The service hours I put in have allowed me to learn a lot, like helping people is fun!"

Members of both the Penn and Bremen FFA listened to teacher Mel Lenig as they watched for fish in a pool at the fish hatchery. Lenig won Indiana Agricultural Teacher of the Year.

Anna Lenig, senior, received the State FFA Degree. Only three percent of FFA members are awarded this. Lenig was very enthusiastic about FFA, "I've learned and gained so much and have become a better leader." She plans on running for State FFA office next year.

FFA members race one another in go carts at the Indiana State Fair. The students picked the car of their favorite racer and enjoyed the competition.

The Penn FFA group took a picture with the students of Bremen FFA. The group just finished with Swamp Stomp, where they walked through a swamp. This trip brought them closer to nature every time they went.

Jim Lamont, sophomore, joined FFA because he enjoyed Mel Lenig's class. Lamont said, "I live on a farm so it made sense to join!"

Kori Curtis, sophomore, joined FFA this year. Curtis said, "I joined so I could learn more about becoming a conservation officer."

Badge Webber, sophomore, awaited the pitch during a softball game where the members of FFA took time to get to know each other.

The group was able to see American Idol season four winner Carrie Underwood when she preformed at the National Convention for FFA.

The group Heartland also performed at the National Convention. Country singers performed to show their support for the young adults in FFA.

FFA members went on Swamp Stomp, an odor-wonderful excursion. They waded through swampy waters lookingfor wildlife while having fun. Many, like Mel Lenig, got very wet.

We Show 'em. . . We Eat 'em. . .

Juniors Kayla Barnett and Alex Morehead along with sophomores Jim Lamont and Kori Curtis walked through a field after Swamp Stomp.

Elizabeth Parkman, sophomore, played on the FFA softball team in the spring. "FFA is a great way to get to know people," explained Parkman.

Justin Hill, junior, prepared the ground for planting at a house that the members of FFA landscaped this spring. "FFA has been full of great experiences!" Hill said.

David Coleman, senior, explained to junior Kelsey Brown the swinging movement of golf. Scenes like this brought out the play's uniqueness by doing unexpected things, such as a handicapped man teaching the "normal" person.

Shane Miller, junior, gave his monologue, a favorite of many in the play. This role was especially difficult for him because he had no previous roles like this to draw from. "I be Lucien P. Smith and I mean business!" he said, before launching into a recitation of the ABCs.

The girls in the play had a lot of down time together outside their performance where they would listen to music as well as socialize. This brought more fun to the actors.

Juniors Brenton Abram-Copenhaver and Lucas Miner, along with senior Andrew Corporon, bicker while being separated by the case worker. "The major message of this play was to show the audience that four mentally handicapped men living together would be different, but very similar to what most people call a normal life," explained Miner.

Seniors Natalie MacRae, Kara Weaver, and Alix Wiggs sat at the dance held for the mentally disabled. There was very little dancing, and only some socializing. MacRae enjoyed this role and theater in general, "In theatre you can be someone else and escape your own life for a while," she said.

The boys next door. . .

"I really had no choice [to join theatre], I am an actor by default."

Brenton Abram-Copenhaver, junior (Norman)

"I love theatre, I always have. Fun people, fun times, lots of laughs and crazy memories."

Kara Weaver, senior (Sheila)

"It took a lot of bravery to pull this play off. We didn't want to offend anyone, but wanted it to be real." David Coleman, senior (Barry)

Andrew Corporon, senior, sat amongst the groceries he brought home from work. "There were a lot of Wheaties but no milk. We kept the props so long the milk went bad and we had to use paint," he explained.

Senior Kara Weaver and junior Brenton Abram-Copenhaver finally shared a dance together, something long awaited in the play.

Senior David Coleman nervously talked to his father, junior Justin Glennon while junior Lucas Miner acted as a mediator during this meeting. It had been years since they last saw each other.

Seniors Sarah Obren and David Coleman, who played one of the four boys, talked to each other about golf while she nodded quietly and was the active listener.

Senior Alix Wiggs questions the boys at a hearing to decide their independent living arrangements.

"What I liked was the cool sign on my door with my name on it, the hat with bangles on it, and the bath robe I got. It was nice."

Andrew Corporon, senior (Arnold)

"I joined theater because I can't play football."

Shane Miller, junior (Lucien)

"This was a really difficult role for me. I've always done goofy characters, never one this serious."

Lucas Miner, junior (Jack)

Matt DeVito. 11. and Sarah Obren. 12. portrayed a newlywed couple. Mr. Thorkelson and Trina. Upon receiving permission to wed from her Uncle Chris. Trina married Mr. Thorkelson. a mortician.

Some of the family gathered around Uncle Chris death bed. This was a very emotional and difficult role for Lucas Miner. "I see my grandpa a lot in the character that I'm playing." Miner said.

The frightened children formed a line in order to pass Uncle Chris' health inspection. The children always dreaded his visits because he was loud and obnoxious.

Sarah Obren. 12. and Jenny Reber. 11. both portrayed sisters of Mama. Reber's character. Aunt Jenny, was a pessimistic. bitter old woman. On the other hand. Obren's role as Aunt Trina was more charismatic and lovable.

Juniors Lucas Miner and Matt DeVito discussed the matters of marriage and a dowry. The decision was permission for marriage but there would be no dowry.

The family gathered around the table to listen to Mr. Hyde's nightly reading. Mr. Hyde, played by Brenton Abram-Copenhaver, rented a spare room in the house.

Senior Natalie MacRae commented on her experience from the play.

Abbey Hockman. 11. as Uncle Chris' wife, Jessie.

Junior Shane Miller played Ali Hakim, a flamboyant peddler who buys and sells useless items such as these smelling salts. Hakim also introduced Ado Annie to a "Persian Good-bye," telling her, "One goodbye is never enough."

Aunt Eller (senior Chelsea Zimmerman) shot a gun, saying, "When I was up in the house I shot the gun but it didn't go off, so I shot it again and I scared myself along with the audience."

After Ali Hakim gave Ado Annie (senior Kayla Wisler) a Persian Good-bye, Will Parker (junior Brenton Abram-Copenhaver) gave his girl Annie an Oklahoma Hello! Will was willing to give up everything to win Annie while Hakim was willing to give up everything to lose her.

Juniors Brenton Abram-Copenhaver and T.J. Mathieu danced in "Kansas City." Actors had to balance singing with dancing at the same time while still holding the right facial expressions.

The women's chorus sang together with Laurey, senior Natalie MacRae, who commented on the show, "It's a great experience to be the lead in a musical because it combines three main elements: dancing, acting, and singing."

Oh, what a beautiful mornin: . .

Senior Kara Weaver played Gertie Cummings who is known for her outrageous laugh. Cummings had a girl fight with Ado Annie, senior Kayla Wisler, over Ali Hakim.

Aunt Eller, played by senior Chelsea Zimmerman, examined a pair of bloomers. Zimmerman's personality fit the mold for this humorous character.

Junior TJ Mathieu lifted freshman Sarah Holaway during a closing song. Both were first year musical participants and plan on auditioning in their future years of high school.

OKLAHOMA!

The entire cast and chorus finished the musical with a great finale. Together they sang and danced to "Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin'," which was also the musical's opening. This musical was made up of 44 cast members, 28 pit, and 12 students who worked tech.

Andrew Carnes, played by senior David Coleman, was ready to shoot Ali Hakim, junior Shane Miller, after he insulted his daughter Ado Annie. Coleman commented on the musical, "It's a great experience to be part of such a big production. I'm going to miss it."

Senior Tiffany Huffman danced the Dream Laurey. In this scene Jud fought with Curly and eventually captured Laurey and took her away. Huffman has danced since a young age and her talent was perfect for this ballet scene.

Junior Lucas Miner played the dangerous and scary role of Jud Fry. In the smokehouse Curly, senior Evan Craker, tried to persuade Jud to hang himself. Together the two sang "Poor Jud" which eventually led to Jud wanting to kill Curly.

The ending for the musical was a unique one. Curly and Laurey left for their honeymoon in a surrey. This same surrey was used in Penn's first musical, Oklahoma!, sixteen years ago.

The farmer and the cowman should be friends...

Junior Charley Pickering played Ike Skidmore, who looked through the dangerous toy called "The Little Wonder." Jud wanted to use this toy to kill Curly, but fortunately, his plan failed.

Senior Cha'vez Williams showed off a basket that was up for bids during the auction. Williams has danced his whole life and was able to contribute his talent to the production.

Seniors Cera
Tychonievich and Lauren Patterson

Laurey danced

The chorus played a vital part in making the show a success.

Freshmen Iboro Ikene and Mackenzie Jarvis played servants. Jarvis also was the understudy for the lead role, a big step for a freshman in her first performance.

Anna Barncord, junior, felt the weight of being the main character. "I spent many nights memorizing lines. It was stressful, but well worth it," she said.

For four years, senior Cha'ves Williams participated in the children's play. This is unique because the play is usually comprised of underclassmen. Williams was hilarious in his turtle role.

A popular scene in the play was when sea witch, Jenny Reber, junior, was tied up. "Whenever I asked kids what their favorite part was they always said that part," she said.

During rehearsals, many new friendships were made. Sophomore Seth Umbaugh became "tight" with the cast after long rehearsals together. Junior Justin Glennon played the Urchin, the king's trusted adviser.

Turn Upward, Swim Upward...

Carly Dunn, freshman

"The audiences never lost their excitement since it was a children's play."

T.J. Mathieu, junior

The Little Mermaid

By William Glennon

Prince Ollie, played by T.J. Mathieu, junior, sat with mermaid Anna Barncord, junior. "I tried to make the character as fun for the kids as I could, Mathieu said. "Every night we did the play was a new adventure."

The sea witch's (Jenny Reber) sneaky accomplice, Tort, played by Carly Dunn, freshman, was one of the favorites of the show along with her turtle friend Turt.

The mermaid's family, including sophomores Seth Umbaugh and Samantha Pugia, freshman Derek Bacon, and junior Julia Bradford, impatiently waited for the young girl to return from her rising.

Esra Heisey, freshman, was a sea captain who almost crashed his ship into a rock because of the distraction caused by the Little Mermaid's stolen siren-like voice.

To help prepare the mermaid for her rising, a very special event, the servants, played by freshmen Iboro Ikene, William Roboski, Derek Bacon and sophomore Kaylee Ross, all helped glamorize her.

.. Time To Rise

"A lot of people expect the Disney version of the Little Mermaid, so it's hard to make the character my own."

Anna Barncord, iunior

"Everyone in the play had each other's backs. We were a family."

Justin Glennon, junior

"Everyone had so much fun together, but they worked very hard at the same time."

Samantha Pugia, sophomore

"Battle of the Bands totally rocked! Everyone should go next year!" said Jimmy Zenger, junior. This was Jimmy Zenger's first year performing in Battle of the Bands.

Battle winner, The Maharishis, Michael Leslie, Kyle Murg, and Andy Corporon posed with fellow Battle participant, Big John Winn, in front of the Kingsman.

Josh Kelver, senior, played his accordian in his band, The Ferns. Kelver started playing the accordian six years ago after watching Weired Al.

"This is my third year in the Battle. I have been with a different band each time, but I always have a lot of fun,"said David Witucki, junior. This year Witucki performed with the band the Dukes of Shackleford.

"I had a rad time. Everybody tried hard and played well." said Adam Weaver, senior. Weaver was a guitarist for the band B.F.F.

"I have played the drums for seven years and I really enjoy just playing with my friends," said Scott Verduin, senior. Verduin's band, B.F.F., placed third in the Battle.

Clash of drums, and a flash of light...

"I have played in Battle of the Bands for three years, and each time it is a totally different experience and it makes me a better musician."

Robi Davidson, senior

"I'm friends with everybody in the band; they're like my family. It's a different experience being in the band then just watching."

Adam Metcalfe, sophomore

"We played a lot of gigs over the summer, so now the nerves don't really get to me."

Tim Thielka, sophomore

The Blazing Battle of an Enlightened Night

"David Bowie is amazing!" said Paul Gordon, senior. Gordon practiced his guitar while waiting for his band's audition.

"Adam Weaver's smile made everything worth it," said senior Troy Lower. Lower played his didgeridoo in his band B.F.F.

"We do what we love to do; we love to rock out!" said Gordon Sill, junior. Gordon was the talent show winner this year for his piano playing.

"It is a great experience that allows people to hear different kinds of music that our students bring," said Kyle Murg, senior.

Seniors Adam Marsh and Kyle Kuczmanski performed with junior Brendan Reeder. Their band, the Dukes of Shackleford, placed second in the Battle.

Battle of the Bands stole the night.

Big John Winn, senior

"I had such nice pants on, my butt looked amazing. That's why we won."

Andrew Corporon, senior

"What does the last letter in B.F.F. stand for? FOREVER! Yeah and that's rad dude!"

Sam Tuthill, senior

Sophomore Austin Solliday and freshman Reggie Keim did the "worm" during the entire guys' dance. This year it was full of hiphop moves and 20th century instead of just focusing on the music.

Student assistants struck a pose during their '90s dance. They performed to Madonna's popular song "Vogue" and wore black business suits.

Freshman Natalie Nagy was the only '70s performer to wear a blonde Afro wig. She danced to the disco theme and made the popular disco move of the time.

Nicholas Davis, sophomore, surfed in the middle of the stage to a Beach Boys' song. He was surrounded by the girls in his class.

Junior Mia Foster leaped across stage during her modern dance. Foster was a student assistant and helped teach her class their dances all year.

Blake VanDe Voorde, senior, was surrounded by his female classmates as one of the only boys in his jazz performance. His charisma on stage made him very fun to watch.

Doi and Colin
Pestow said, "Being partners helped us get to know each other.
We love dance class!"

Clare Kopec, j u n i o r , smiled in her '70s outfit. Kopec plans on continuing her dance career in college.

Dancing Through The Decades

their tap routine. Student assistant Grace Padgett, senior, helped teach this dance. "The performance went really well. I will really miss not having dance in my future," Padgett said.

A first year dance class danced to "Trickle Trickle" for This tap performance used glow-in-the-dark sticks to add more sound to their routine. The lights were all out except for black lights that lit up the sticks. Sophomore Danielle Reid and juniors MacKenzie Austgen and Kendra Beckham used the sticks while the other half tapped.

Freshmen Kelli Yapp, Lauren Haney, and Mikalene Hiatt prepare for their entrance on stage for the '70s themed dance. This was their first year being part of Penn Dance but all three have danced in the past.

This modern performance ended with a lift in the center of the stage with the other dancers surrounding them. Modern is a very artistic way of expressing oneself in dance and can be very emotional.

Seniors Lindsay Nyerges and Cara McGuin presented an opening to the '50s dance in their poodle skirts.

Samuel Troeger, junior, danced with partner, J o a n n a Manningham, freshman, in sailor costumes.

Junior Jennifer Lindsay danced in the ballet performance. She is also on the poms competition squad and has danced for many years.

Sophomore Meg Green is part of Girls' Choir which is made up of mainly sophomores. The choir usually has fun pieces that demonstrate what they've learned their first two years in choir with some choreography added.

Junior Kayla Warren, senior Geena Stilp, and junior Jessica Lafree sang together in Penn's Symphonic Choir. This choir is combined of Women's Chorale and Concert Choir. Together, they performed at the Morris Performing Arts, a week before their December concerts.

Senior Jeff Darr played the part of Elvis during one of the many Singing Kingsmen songs. Darr explained, "The winter concerts are my favorite. The spring concerts are fun but the winter ones always have the holiday theme."

Junior Shane Miller played the part of the monotone angel with the rest of the Chamber Choir. Chamber Choir is made up of an even number of girls and boys so each student may have a dancing partner. The group of 29, which includes the instrumentalists, performed locally and always did a great job.

Members of the freshmen choir walked down the stairs in the auditorium during the candle light processional. This was the opening to the concert where all students carried candle sticks to create a warm festive feeling. It was a sensational sight to sit in the auditorium and have over three hundred candles light up around you, as you listened to the students' soft and beautiful voices.

Senior Chelsea Zimmerman sang a solo in the piece I Wander as I Wonder. "I was so nervous, I stopped breathing and focused on singing rather than the camera that was in my face," Zimmerman remarked.

"My favorite part of performing is looking into the audience and seeing the children looking back at us and remembering that I was that child driven by a performance similar to ours knowing that I wanted to do that one day."

Matt DeVito, junior

Seniors David Coleman and Natalie MacRae danced together in a Chamber Choir performance. "Chamber Choir is fun because it's the top choir at Penn and it's something I've looked forward to throughout high stated school," MacRae.

Holiday Melodies

Members of Women's Chorale sang their selected pieces at one of the three December concerts. Women's Chorale is an advanced combined choir between junior and senior girls. The girls traveled to Saint Mary's earlier in the year for a choral workshop.

Junior Lucas Miner and senior Tiffany Huffman portrayed Frosty the Snowman and a young child who played in the snow. This was the final song to the concert and a great way to end the show. Children at the concert enjoyed seeing the friendly snowman.

Members of all choirs lined up around the auditorium for the ending processional. After this took place, each choir performed alone and then came together at the end for a grand finale. Students spent the first few months of the school year preparing for this concert.

Junior Lucas Miner, seniors Evan Craker and Ryan Grashorn and junior Brenton Abram Copenhaver are the four who sang in the quartet for the annual men's song "Shepherds Awake." Their role in the song is to echo the rest of the choir. To create a mysterious feeling, the four are placed on the balcony where they can't be seen.

Singing Kingsmen showed off their Elvis moves as they preformed "Jingle Bell Boogie." This is a choir which contains all different grade levels. They are known for their manly sound and their incredible moves.

Seniors Lauren Patterson and Jessica Yoder posed together at a banquet to kick off the choir season.

Freshman Kate Hill reflected on her choir season, "This was a really great experience. Choir is a life long thing because your instrument is always with you."

Senior Kayla Wisler has been a four year choir student. She has participated in chamber choir for one year, and she plans on auditioning for the Purdettes, a women's glee club.

Senior Chelsea Rhoades and junior Chris Loes practiced their music before the Kaleidoscope concert, which paid off when the audience responded with roaring applause.

Freshman Tom Gustafson played the timpani during the January concert. According to Andrew Waldenmeyer, senior, percussion has its own class so they can do more individual work, "instead of waiting 20 minutes just to ring a bell note."

Senior Logan Cenova made a funny face to make his peers laugh and relax before the concert.

Finding their rhythm of life ...

"Our senior class is amazing. They gave their best all four years and placed the highest they ever did."

Emily Wolverton, senior

"First day of basics was horrible, but with time it got better."

Patrick Vorenkamp, junior

"The songs we played were repetitive which helped us improve our skills,"

Colleen Klockow, senior

Playing the Notes of Chaos

Saxophone players gave it their all and best efforts to achieve a perfect sound during the performance.

Glenn Northern, one of the band directors, prepared the students by giving them a pep talk. Pep talks along with practicing weeks in advance put the students in the mind set of being at a concert.

Seniors Abi Osthimer and Emily Wolverton smiled before they started warming-up with scales on their instruments before the concert.

Maggie Willenbrink, freshman, focused on her music sheet in order to play her best.

Many of the band members gathered for a picture before they walked on to be seated. It is very important to be prompt and prepared to play at all times.

Brian Kimm. freshman

"I usually practice early in the morning to wake my sister up."

Andrew Hiles, freshman

"Jazz is something I'll always admire and that is why I chose to play the saxophone."

Jeff Veal. sophomore

Although women are a minority in jazz band, Helen Roskowski and Liz Parkman, sophomore saxophonists, never found it awkward. "It was never odd being the only girls because we all had a common interest, jamming out and making music," they said.

Junior Austin Davis, saxophonist, said, "It was great to be in jazz band because we got to learn musical interpretation and style."

Following the footsteps of Wynton Marsalis, a pair of sophomore Matts, Bilik and Hiss, played trumpets in "The Mooche."

While jazz is usually associated with horns, jazz guitar, played here by sophomore Keegan Hrybyk, has a big impact on the ensemble sound.

Ben Mahoney, Mike Villano and Brandon Ernest jam in "Jump." A plumber's plunger mutes the sound of trombones.

A major part of jazz is improv, where melodies are made up on the spot. Nick Carter, Brendan and Brian Reeder, Jimmy Chazar, and Devin Fanslow, all played solos simultaneously.

Groovin' with Nestico and Ellington

"Jazz band was fun because we all got to sit back and jam out together."

Michael Jordon, senior

"I feel ASTO was one of the best ways to start up for a Jazz class. Even if you don't continue jazz it is still just as fun to play with other Jazz players."

Partick Vorenkamp, junior

"This was my first year in jazz, and it has been a blast. Next year is going to be even better."

Emily Gooch, junior

Sweets, Treats, and All That Jazz

In jazz music, melodies sometimes change from instrument to instrument. Alex Layhmeyer, Mitchell Parker, Zach Schultz, Dennis Healy, Josh Noeldner and Becky Seel rested while waiting for their part to come in.

Evan Ray and Patrick Vorrencamp played trombone. Trombone requires a good ear to play becuase there are no keys to press down to make specific pitches like trumpets and saxophones.

Sophomore Jake Millie and freshmen Travis Landuit and Mike Reising played baritone sax. Baris have a much deeper sound than alto or tenor saxes.

Tom Gustafson, freshman, usually played percussion, but here he plays bass instead of timpani.

Junior Jimmy Zenger and sophomores Tim Mastic and Zach Staley, are members of the after school jazz orchestra, which is made up of musicians who may have jazz band during the day, but want to further their jazz learning after 3:17 p.m.

"Take Five" with "The Mooche" and "The Queen Bee"

"Jazz band is a lot of fun and it teaches you to break the rules of basic music. There is so much creativity involved. It has been a real challenge.'

Katie Kraft, sophomore

"Jazz band is a cool way for us to take our talents in music and make fun out of it. Jazz band is a blast!"

Jimmy Zenger, junior

"Soloing was fun. It really got me into the jazz type."

Michael Leathers, freshman

Senior Agnes Zybrra looked to her notes for guidance during her concert. She played the violin for four years.

Mae Hope, freshman, bowed her bass during her orchestra class. There is much Hope for her to become an expert bass player in the future.

Junior Lance Wu played "Whistle Down the Wind" at the winter orchestra concert. Wu played bass in the pit for Oklahoma! Both Wu and his sophomore sister, Christine, have played piano since kindergarten.

Freshman Joe Zeyen played his cello while he stared at his music to guide him. Cellos have a mellow sound which compliments other strings, such as violins.

Sophomore Joe Mwamba bowed his violin during orchestra class. Mwamba expects to be involved in the Penn Orchestra for two more years.

Penn High School Orchestra

"I prefer piano to viola because I like the atmosphere of playing with an entire orchestra--160 people accompanying me as a soloist."

Ben Manderfeld, senior

"We work really hard and have a lot of fun."

Colin Mills, junior

"Orchestra is fun because it gives me a chance to get lost in the music."

"It's been a lot of fun to get to know everyone in orchestra the past four years."

Christina Clark,

"[Orchestra] was a very good experience and I met a lot of new people."

Mike Germano, junior

"I enjoy orchestra because it's a class I don't need to study as hard for it, but it still looks good on my transcript."

Chris Bauschka, freshman

Ruvi Chauhan, junior, displayed her very dull pencil after a full day of practice of tests. Toward the end of the season, the team spelled at least 400 words every practice.

Sophomore Carolyn Chang received her varsity letter from Coach Peter De Kever. Team members earn a letter after two years or for 36 words spelled correctly in a varsity competition.

Junior Linda Huang waited for the team to spell a word from her list. The team started practice everyday with a 100 word student-given test.

Senior and captain Josh Kelver looked up the pronunciation of the word "querulous" in the dictionary. The team often relied on the help of the dictionary, affectionately named "Big Red."

Senior Sarah Kiefer proudly displayed the state champion banner. After each state title, the team is awarded a banner to display in the school.

The team posed with the score chart after winning the regional competition. Penn scored a perfect 90 words correct and secured a spot in the state finals.

Spell It Out

"Spell Bowl is hard work. At the beginning, it seems impossible. After we won State and we look back, it's great to see how all of it paid off."

Kelsey McClure, sophomore

"Now that Spell Bowl is over, I don't know what to do with myself. I find myself wandering the hallways after school, mysteriously drawn to room 125."

Beth Ames, junior

"We lost a lot of great seniors last year, but everyone worked hard to make up for it. It was worth all the many words and hours."

Alissa Kish, senior

Spellbound x Eight

Freshmen Matt DeGeyter, Kaley Buck, and Michael Ogden posed in the Happy Trolley after the Logansport invitational. It's tradition for each class to take a picture in the trolley after the competition.

Spell Bowl seniors celebrated the victory by crossing the "finish line." The state championship was the final event of their years of hard work, hand cramps, and unprecedented success.

The team celebrated their victory after the final word at the state competition.

Penn kept the one point lead by spelling "Oberammergau" to win with a score of 89 of 90 words correct.

Coach Peter De Kever pronounced a word during a lightning round. The team spelled over 60 of the fast-paced practice tests by the state competition.

Freshman Kaley Buck and sophomore Eunice Jeong worked on writing the word list. Including one time in the summer, the team copied the list a total of six times for extra practice.

"The work and the words get a little monotonous, but it all adds up when we won state."

Laura McGinn, junior

"Leadership is inspiring but nervewracking. When you've invested that much time of your life in something, it's important to get good results."

Jenny DeVito, senior, captain

"Four years on Spell Bowl and all I've got to show for it is a bunch of championship rings."

Vik Rao, senior, captain

Senior Miel Sundararajan and freshman Alyssa Yeung smiled, with glee, as their math team answered another question correctly.

English captain Deborah Wei, senior, took a moment to "chill" with "Got Milk?" star David Beckham after an intense, yet successful, round of the competition.

Seniors Adam Marsh and Ryan Toth eyed the camera suspiciously as they contemplated the answer to one of the social studies questions; neither of them are on the social studies team.

Seniors Jenny DeVito and Eunice Ikene playfully studied for their English round; this characterized the typical study habits of the team.

Seniors David Yeung, Adam Marsh and J.P. Wright nourished themselves before their rounds began.

The Social Studies team displayed their ribbons. Each year, the competition revolves around a specific time period, and all academic teams focus on the same time.

The English team read Much Ado about Nothing, Othello, and the poetry of Spenser and Donne. While Deborah Wei always second-guessed herself, she was usually right the first time.

David Yeung showed what being a senior is all about: his actions showed true perseverance and dedication--and he ate a lot of food, which Sean Gonderman attributes to the math team's success. ("Miel did good, too," Gonderman said.)

"Honestly, my E n g l i s h skills were not the best, so I wanted to improve them by joining ASB. Iago is a conniving, little. . .

Ryan Toth, senior

English Garners First-Ever First Place at State

Mathletes David Yeung, Mike Xue, and Miel Sundararajan, all seniors, gawked at each other in amazement after correctly answering another difficult math question.

After a long day of school, driving two hours to a meet, and competing from 5:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m., the Social Studies team flaunted their ribbons. Often, team members did not arrive back at Penn until midnight.

Juniors Ruvi Chauhan and Linda Huang studied intensely in Bishop Dwenger's cafeteria while senior Emily Sauer tried to distract them.

The English team brandished their shiny first place ribbons under the "Adults Only" (which is not pictured) section at a competition.

The Social Studies team studied incessantly; the focus for this year's ASB was Elizabethan England. Longest serving member, Jenny DeVito, clocked the most practices.

Junior Linda Huang displayed great aptitude and dedication for the Math ASB team. She also is lucky enough to visit France this summer as part of the IU Honors Program.

Mimi Junior dis-Chan great skill in an-ASB swering questions, as well as competed in Model United Nations.

Science ASB member Adam Marsh believes that birds evolved from dinosaurs, and he has the 16page senior exhibition paper to prove it.

Senior Caitlyn Foster and junior Brittney Katz took a break from playing the role of Grecian representatives during Model United Nations. This was the first year Penn had a team in several years.

Quiz Bowl members, Dmitri Gekhtman, Daniel Howard and Johnny Zhang, all sophomores, discussed answers to various trivia related problems.

Senior Mengwen Zhang and Science Academic Coach Lynda Rose discussed the solution to a science question.

The math academic super bowl team, especially freshman Alyssa Yeung, contemplates the answer to a difficult question.

Seniors David Bretz, David Yeung and Elizabeth High decipher the meaning of complex mathematical equations. Such was the norm of an exceptionally bright Knowledge Masters team.

Seniors Janice Rottenberg and Deborah Wei smile in between sessions during Model United Nations. Wei was the founder of the new activity, while Rottenberg finished as the best delegate with senior teammate Dillon Gonderman.

All Signs Point to Success

Junior Mimi
Chan, despite her sarcastic sense of humor, has an optimistic outlook on her senior year as an ASB member.

Coach Jim Sauer looks pensive as he prepares his team on their pathway to a state championship.

Junior Annsa Huang, an integral part of the ASB team, will travel to Spain with the IU Honors Program.

All Around Success For Academic Teams

The academic team listens to a presentation over subject matter. The teams often practiced hard and long, using unique methods of conveying information to one another.

Sundararajan smile as they compete in Model United Nations. Model United Nations is the newest academic event at Penn High School.

Senior Elizabeth High and junior Mimi Chan prepare for the North Korean and China Cabinet on the bus ride to Model U.N.

Seher Chowhan is an engaged listener during practice. Chowhan is also avidly involved in art classes and hopes to integrate art into her life even as she pursues other academic goals.

The dynamic duo of Davids (David Bretz and David Yeung) have double the brain power of one David.

Incredible Turnout for State Competition

Brittney Katz was able to balance time be-Model tween United Nations. Student Council, and Lacrosse.

Sophomore Luhou Shen has an aptitude for mathematics as well as a flair for artistic design (as evidenced by his work with a moldable eraser). He also liked pie on March

Senior Eunice Ikene, a brilliant member of the English ASB team. will attend the University of Notre Dame in Senior David Yeung prepared for his next debate round. Coach Dawn Troyer said of Yeung, "I'm proud of the growth David has shown as a debater this year."

Senior captain Deborah Wei cross-examined a West Lafayette opponent in the State Final. Wei's talent and dedication were key factors in the debate team's success this season.

Senior Policy Debater, Janice Rottenberg, delivered a rapid-fire cross examination during the final rounds of the debate state finals. Rottenberg's four years of debate were as memorable as they were successful.

Seniors Miel Sundarajaran and David Bretz paused during competition preparations. Sundarajaran said about debate, "Standing at the podium and thinking on your feet is exhilarating."

The Debate team beamed after the news of winning third in state; this was the highest position that the team has gained collectively. This was especially impressive considering the exceptionally small size of the team this year.

Public Forum debate partners Annsa Huang and Rachel LeClere intensely prepared for the next round of debates. The two were an unlikely pair, both former policy debaters experimenting in a new venue. Even so, they had great success in their brand new venture.

Debate Team Dazzles With Third Place Finish

"Debate is challenging but definitely worthwhile!"

Eunice Ikene and Ruby Parikh, seniors

"Congress was an exceptionally rewarding experience."

Kate Ripley, junior

"The interesting thing about Congress was all the opinionated people."

Shirin Baradaran, sophomore

Forensics Puts Forth Another Fantastic Year

Seniors Sarah Obren and David Coleman preformed their scripted duo. The two were given little time to prepare for the state competition, yet even with the new act and the extraordinary time constraints, they finished twelfth at State.

Junior Kelsey Brown practiced before her original performance with fellow junior Janey Smith. The two created their own script of an incredibly entertaining piece about the dangers of fast food. The duo finished 15th.

ors Shane Miller, Pat Naples, and Brenton Abram-Cenhaver discussed their previous rounds at the State nament. All three were State finalists. Naples finished in impromptu, Abram-Copenhaver finished fourth in orized duo, and Miller was a state finalist in two rent events, Memorized Duo and Prose Juniors Jenny Reber and Janey Smith found the stamina to pose after an incredibly long day of competition. Both Reber and Smith competed in State Semifinals, with Reber finishing eighth place in the poetry event and Smith placing 15th with her original performance.

Seniors Dillon Gonderman and David Coleman walked down the hallway with juniors Brenton Abram-Copenhaver and Shane Miller. The four State finalists were major contributing factors in the team's excellent sixth place finish.

Speech Team Finishes with Spectacular Sixth Place Ranking

"Playing an autistic kid was an eye opening experience."

Shane Miller,

"While the season as a whole had its ups and downs, I felt as though the team really pulled together and excelled when it mattered most."

Pat Naples, junior

"The State Finals were awesome, but I couldn't stand Quasi and his henchman."

Sarah Obren. senior

Junior Annie Sauer reviewed notes prior to the final trial at the state competition. She played the plaintiff suing for damages done to her home.

Seniors Dan Marshall and Best Attorney recipient Gautham Vaidyanathan, the only fourth year Mock Trial members, led one of the best teams in the state.

Bryan Jones played the eye witness to a vandalism that ruined an old woman's home. "Our team meshed really well despite this being our first year together," said Jones.

The Penn team waited in anticipation at the awards ceremony at the state competition in Indianapolis. Their third place ranking was Penn's best in five years.

The Penn council table reacted to a testimony from an opposing team. Penn went 5-2 and 1/2 and scored the second highest amount of points, which was 715.

The Vaider's Raiders squad, coached by attorney Chris Putt, placed fifth in their regional at the South Bend County Courthouse.

Plaintiff. . .

"It was tough, but I finally was able to play the crazy old man."

Bryan Franklin Jones, senior

"Being a double lawyer was fun. I learned about the law and while it was a lot of work, it was worth it."

Elissa Gennicks, junior

"I played the Indian convenience store owner with an Indian attorney. I think I fit the role well."

Ruvi Chauhan, junior

Layin' Down the Law

Penn's A team, The Padawans, placed first in their regional in Hammond and advanced to state. Despite having only four returning Mock Trial members, they were one of the best teams in the state.

Sean Gonderman, senior, showed Ruvi Chauhan, junior, a display during an exhibition at the South Bend Federal Courthouse.

Shirin Baradaran sat patiently as she awaited her turn to perform in a round at the State competition. Her role as a lawyer was pivotal for Penn Mock Trial in her rookie year.

Sarah Budimen and Katie Marsh, sophomores, were members of the Vaider's Raiders squad. "Best witness is SO worth the dress," said Marsh. She received a Best Witness award at the South Bend Regional.

Penn's top team and a John Adams High squad waited in the courtroom as the judges were assigned. The state competition stretched over three days and four rounds of exhaustion.

. Defense

"Six hour practices, assorted fast food, and a room full of idiots equals mock trial practice."

Thomas Fryska,

"Idon't know how, but I got a best attorney in my first year doing this."

Shirin Baradaran, sophomore

"Basically, our team motto is 'Live to Fall Short'."

Ryan Barnum, junior

Karsen Kistler, senior, tried to entertain the rest of the PNN Staff by rapping into the microphone during a practice taping of a show. His dynamic personality and great camera work made him an instant hit with PNN. "I'm simply amazing," said Kistler.

Director Mike Walker, junior, adjusted a screen. "This year, we had to not only overcome technical problems, but had to experiment with new ways to air our show," said Walker.

Kevin McNulty, the PNN teacher, watched carefully as his staff of students worked to finish the show, given the short amount of production time available.

Andrew Waggoner, senior, did an interview for the sports section of a PNN show. "No one sees us because there is no homeroom; because no one see us, there is no hope," said Waggoner.

Pat Naples and Paul Azzi, juniors, got ready to do a newscast for PNN. "The ability to overcome the lack of technologically advanced equipment is a key part in achieving success in PNN," said Naples.

Breaking

The News

Nolan Marker, senior, edited a tape that would eventually become a voice over video for PNN football coverage. Marker was a veteran member of PNN, and one of the only three returning members of PNN.

Drew Niedbala, senior, managed camera two during a run through of a show for PNN. Luckily for PNN and Penn High School, the show was able to air every morning for five minutes during the second semester.

Daryl Bjoraas, junior, described his importance to PNN, "I anchor, I edit, I make packages, I do reporting and I run the switcher. Basically, I'm the LeBron James of PNN."

Seniors Kyle Danielowicz and Ross Erickson ran the sound system on PNN during the taping of a show. Erickson said, "I have a smaller part than most guys on the set."

Joseph Mwamba, sophomore, and Amanda Sill, junior, worked attentively at the soundboard. "Getting five minutes of air time is a great start to reviving PNN. Hopefully, by my senior year, we will be able to return to our usual fifteen minute show," said Mwamba longingly.

Senior Chelsea Brinton wrote out plans for the day's work. Her organizational skills were essential to the construction of a working robot.

Senior Sean Hagan peered over his work to make sure it was just right. His attitude towards the robot was microcosmic of the atmosphere of the entire team as they worked tirelessly to finish the product.

Seniors Zach Schroeder and Ben Sheyko worked together on the robot. Team chemistry was essential to the team's success at different venues across the country.

Senior Eric Nagy manipulated machinery to modify aspects of the robot. Nagy was a vital part of the team which competed at Purdue, in South Carolina, and in Atlanta.

Seniors Alex Lee and Martin Davenport used safety equipment while working. Such precautions were necessary to keep life and limb while preforming hazardous tasks.

Robotics Prepares Students for Future Endeavors

"I never would have thought of doing robotics before I tried it. Now, because of robotics, I am changing my major in college."

Chelsea Brinton, senior

"Through lots of hard work, I learned many life lessons, and a lot about engineering as well."

Marty
Davenport, senior

"Robotics is an excellent activity which helps you prepare for the future."

Mitchell Wilcox, senior

Robotics Rocks Atlanta

The whole of the robotics lab is put to use as the team furiously fidgeted with minor details of the robot. The team had an amazing time prepping for competition.

The team made adjustments via computer to the robot. Those adjustments paid off, helping the team win the engineering innovation award.

Seniors Eric Nagy and Mitch Wilcox, along with supervisor George Grantz, discussed and worked on various aspects of the project in between competitions. With many opportunities to succeed, the team used trial and error to perfect the finished product.

Senior Adam Gadson started to place finishing touches on the robot. The team was meticulous in its attention to detail, making sure every aspect of it was just right.

Seniors Marty Davenport and Eric Nagy took a moment to arm wrestle in between test runs. With most of the time spent together working, the team relished opportunities to just hang out.

Robotics Changed My Life

"Robotics was absolutely unforgettable; the hard work really paid off."

Eric Nagy, senior

"Robotics was surprisingly one of the most exciting and difficult activities I pursued at Penn."

Whitney Cullen,

"Robotics was a great way to get a jump start into engineering and find innovative solutions to difficult problems."

Brian Leathers, senior

Junior Tyler Salamon and senior Zach Hall worked as one as they cooperated together to pick up a door to put in the frame. Cooperation was key in building the house.

It took the boys ten months to complete the house. Hard work and dedication line the inside walls. The house was projected to sell fast due to the location and quality of the home.

The boys used their skill to nail and drill the outside of the house. Finishing the house on time had been an issue all year. Students worked two blocks every day from August to June.

Les Crooks, building trades teacher, worked hard alongside his students while building the house. He answered all the student's questions by giving demonstrations.

Steve Jankowski accurately cut and measured the hardwood floor panels to fit the space available. Safety is a key element to constructing a sturdy and strong house.

Robert Kuntz, senior, used a level to check his work on the siding of the house. If the siding is not straight, it can cause the siding to have an uneven appearance.

"Cutting the board to fit in a tight space is key! Measure twice, cut once!"

Tyler Salamon, junior

"Building Trades was hard work, but with your friends it was a lot of fun and it made the time pass by quicker."

Mike Hancock, junior

"Hanging dry wall is one of the most physically demanding tasks when building a house. It's very heavy and is a slow process."

Scott Whitfield, junior

I'll Build You Up!

The boys worked together to put up the framework of the house that will soon become a home to a family. The estimated cost of the finished house will be around $185,000.

Senior Jerimiah Maggart along with junior Tyler Salamon nailed and secured the work of the home with precision. It took a lot of hard work and dedication to complete the task of installing the hardwood floors. Unlike most of the house the wooden floors do not get covered or painted, so it is important to be very careful.

Derek Morris performed the difficult Elijah Slabach made sure the banister going down the steps was perfect, because if not, it must be taken down and redone until it is right for the safety of people holding onto it.

"Preparing the drywall for paint, it is crucial that the entire surface has been sanded properly beforehand, even the spots in the bottom of the closet."

Devin Fumarolo, senior

"Being two stories up can be a little scary on a windy day, but with experience and help at the bottom it's always a fun task."

Cory Praklet, junior

"Building Trades helped me make up my mind to go into construction management when I go to college."

Michael Long, senior

Senior Courtney Healy worked on a writing prompt each class. Spectrum students warmed up with an exercise that connected to the style of writing they were working on.

Seniors Cole Kronewitter and Bob Wotring and junior Robert Balliet discussed a piece. The class edited each submission and decided which ones to include in the magazine.

Senior Josh Kelver got the class's attention with his giant megaphone. Kelver was one of three editors.

Sandra Ernsberger, junior, read Country of Language by Scott Russell Sanders. Students read professional works along with student writing.

Juniors Shannon Weaver and Tom Fryska worked on the final drafts of their memoirs. In addition to producing the magazine, students also worked on their own writing.

Senior Rachel Huntley turned her back window into a moving advertisement for Spectrum. Students painted their windows to encourage people to submit their writing.

Straight From the Mouth

"I like being in Spectrum because I can read a variety of different pieces from writers my age."

Alicia Leroy, senior

"In Spectrum, there's a lot more freedom than other classes. Mrs. Malloy's cute too."

Andy Corporon, senior, editor

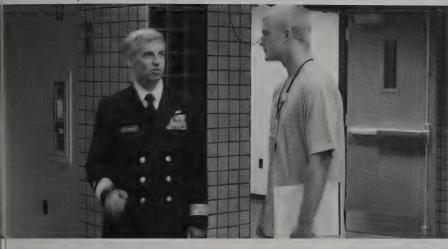

"Spectrum gives me the ability to be part of a schoolwide achievement."

Jennifer Hipsher, senior, editor

Spreading the Word

Senior Jason Wright interviewed Admiral Mark Balmer of the Navy. Balmer graduated from Penn in 1978 and returned to speak with students about leadership.

Sarah Blaase, sophomore, worked on the rough draft of a story about the school's healthy life-style campaign. This was Blaase's first year on the staff.

Caitlyn Osmer, junior, worked on a graphic for the front page of the Pennant. Osmer was one of three graphic designers on staff. She was in charge of the layout of each article.

Editors-in-chief Ashley Henderson, senior, and Katie Moffitt, junior, looked over a copy of the Pennant. The finished papers were distributed to readers during study halls.

Junior Nathaniel Pedue updated the sports section of the Pennant website. The site was updated with new announcements daily and new articles twice a week.

"The hardest part is brainstorming interesting story ideas and localizing issues."

MacKenzie Austgen, junior

"Newspaper is not just an easy class. Jobs have to get done. If they don't, you're letting down all the people waiting on the newspaper."

Ashley Henderson senior editor-in-chief

If these halls could talk. . . What stories would they tell?

"If these halls could talk I am really not exactly sure what they'd say. I'm not sure if I'm remembered by anything yet or have made my mark, because I think I may still be writing it."

Malory Pecina, junior

"If these halls could talk they woul laugh at me, remembering the time tripped on the main staircase in fro of everyone."

Dillon Gonderman, senior

"If these halls could talk...they would tell me to stay in class and stop leaving early."

Bryan Jones, senior

"If these halls could talk they would talk about the people that the students have become. There comments would be 'Have a mind of your own!' 'Be your own person!' 'Don't conform!'"

Lindsay Sarvari, junior

"When I was a wee freshman, I was late for a class and I was hurrying down the main staircase in my new dress shoes, when I skipped a step and fell half way down the stairs. I felt like I was frozen in time as I saw everyone's eyes on me. It was the most painful and horrifying experience."

Emily Riggs, senior

"If these halls could talk...they'd sound nasally as they plugged their noses remembering the way my books and homework smelled when I opened up my backpack in biology the morning after my dog was sprayed by a skunk and I accidently let her in our house."

Ashley Davison, senior

Lindy Goddard, junior

"If these halls could talk I think they'd definitely say I'm always on the go! It seems like I've always got things to do and places to be, but I love staying busy and staying involved."

Lauren Harrell, junior

My story is simple. I'm a guy trying to figure out what he's doing with himself. I am a funny guy, that likes to be the center of attention, a fierce competitor, a leader, and a friend."

Dan Marshall, senior

"My most embarrassing moment was when I walked into class before the bell had rung, not realizing that the class before mine wasn't over yet. Everyone stared at me but the teacher didn't notice so I said, 'Just kidding' and walked right back out."

McKenzie Miller, senior

"If the halls could talk they would say, 'Hello, Moto!'"

Milton Redwine, senior

"If these halls could talk. . .they would be taking bets on when I'll trip again in the hallways. I've tripped, usually over absolutely nothing, so many times the last three years. I'm sure the halls would have lost count."

Juniors Steven White and Brittany Cook displayed their cat dissection project in anatomy. White stated the worst part was "the smell"—the cat has an unique odor. Later in the semester, when they were dissecting cow hears, classmate Ali DenOtter, senior, said, "I would have taken a picture of that but my hands were too bloody."

IIVE. LOVE & LEARN.

Natalie Noonan, senior, intently focused on her art project for ceramics. "I really enjoyed ceramics this year. I learned so much and I wish I had taken more classes," said Noonan.

Juniors Trent Musho, Lindsey Jensen, Josh Cerney, and senior Amanda Peterson, baked a Dr. Seuss cake for a cake competition in Foods and Nutrition class, "The class is fun and useful. You get a good laugh," said Peterson. Other cakes included a magic mushroom from the Super Mario Brother video game and a pool table.

Ninth grade English teacher Kevin McNulty chatted with his students about Odysseus' journey. His students love his anthusiasm which makes learning even uncient mythology fun and exciting.

Freshman Kyle Probst posed on his peg leg while describing the pirate he created in his original story. Jim Schmidt, geography teacher, explained that "the Seminar class wrote a creative story and included a map of their quest."

Sophomore English students, Aaron Fisher, Katie Csenar, and Elizabeth Nash, added their ideas to a chart paper poster. "My favorite part of English is interacting with others," said Nash. "Having English first block was the best possible way to start the day," said Csenar.

Theresa Akre, senior, concentrated hard on the challenging project before her. "Sewing class is a great way to relax, but it may be challenging with the confusing patterns," she said.

Students from Rhea Trowbridge's water activities class pose for a picture after their scuba diving activity. "The best part of the class was that I got to hang out with my best friend, Nikki," said senior Emily Horvath.

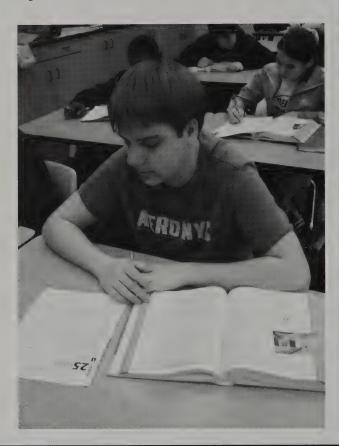

The U.S. History classes reenacted the presidential elections from 1912. "It is more interesting to learn about history when you do activities like this," Catherin Gregory said, Kevin Gall, senior, showed his emotions as he stated his case in a mock court case in Business/Personal Law class. "I plan to study business and marketing at Ball State University next year, so this class was perfect for me," Gall said.

Academics Dying 175

Steve Poland, junior, used a miter saw to cut a cross lab joint in Vaughn Smith's manufacturing class. Those who are crafty enough use these pieces to create a smooth and even corner for a picture frame.

Adam Binder, junior, worked on an insurance packet in Personal Finance. In Jim Garrett's class, students learned about all types of insurance, along with other aspects of the financial world such as record keeping and budget balancing.

Junior Chris Ford formed a new hammer head in a lathe machine in Cory Yeoman's class. This spinning machine grinds and shapes metals.

Junior Sean Duffy used a CNC machine with the help of teacher Cory Yeoman. When they finished, the machine sketched out Duffy's initials. Sophomores Keaton Bloom and Jane Kovach built structures from popsicle sticks in Brad Robertson's Tech Lab Seminar. They built several designs and tested them to see how much weight they held.

Cutting Edges and

Crunching Numbers

Britley Burke and Courtney Horwath, freshmen, placed one of the last pieces on their project in Tech Lab. Burke and Horwath were the first in their class to construct such a gigantic ramp out of hundreds of connectors.

enior Travis Chapman designed an original oster in Electric Communications. hapman's specific flyer detailed the many ecomplishments of the Penn Robotics team.

Tyle Hakanen, senior, concentrated on a reiew practice set, containing all the skills and iformation from the first semester of his ccounting class. Students used real life scearios to better their understanding of the orld of figures.

One of the assignments in Multimedia was to create a new design for a familiar trademark. Junior Brian Lares put the finishing touches on his original design for the Crayola crayon box. "I took this class to improve my knowledge of computers," said Lares.

Senior Ali DenOtter paused for a moment to pose with her dead cat carcass in Anatomy. "Finding all the muscles took a while, and it smelled really bad, but you got used to it. It was really interesting," she said.

Janna Zimmerman, sophomore, took a break from polynomial functions with the plastic Yoda head in Rich Sypel's Algebra 2 Honors class. Anyone who has been in one of Sypel's classes knows that if you want to leave for a moment, the Yoda head goes with you. It's hard to say if Sypel like Star Wars or the White Sox more.

Kayti Paulat, junior, stepped up to adjust a force sensor in Physics honors. This lab on centripetal force took patience and many trials with a swinging pendulum Freshman Matthew Megyese worked on an experiment in Biology honors. The beans represented different genes in the process of natural selection.

Justin Collmer and Morgan Donat, sophomores, melted a chocolate bar to liven up their ordinary marshmallows and make s'mores in chemistry. The class shared some of their treats by delivering them to teachers.

he Left Brain

At Work

Barbara Tibbs, sophomore, got help from Charles Beeson on a question on simple machines in her Integrated Chemistry Physics (ICP) class. A big part of ICP is interactive work in the lab, and then working on problems on the same concept.

Juniors Erin Noonan and Lindsey Jensen and sophomore Taylor Villicana were careful not to burn their marshmallows while holding them over a Bunsen burner. This fun lab was not only an experiment on combustion, but also a delicious reward for a semester of hard work in chemistry

Jose Zepeda, junior, worked his way through a triangle proportion problem in his geometry class. "I like geometry because it's different every day and it keeps you on your toes," he said.

Seniors Adam Lamm and Vik Rao proudly posed with their dead cat specimens in Jane Geesman's anatomy class. Students had to memorize around 130 muscles in the cat's body before they could dissect it. Eventually, the class explored the rest of the specimen, examining the inner organs as well.

Senior Blain Frick was happy to be in Spanish III during the Day of the Dead celebration, November 1. As he stood in line to try the traditional Mexican cuisine, he threw a thumbs up to show his excitement. "Pulgares para arriba!"

Karlee Seider and Jared Plaia, sophomores, played the fun and often competitive game, "Fly Swatter." In this game the teacher said a word in English, and the students had to find the word on the board in Spanish. The first student to hit the word with his/her fly swatter received a point.

Aaron Fisher, sophomore, added in words to the bottom of Maslow's "survival pyramid." This group activity was to prepare the English class to read Lord of the Flies.

Chris Ibarra, freshman, filled in verbs on the board in his French class. Conjugating verbs is a crucial part in any foreign language

Foreign

Juniors Nate DeLue, Heather Barnett, Koneshia Murphy, sophomore Alison Buell, junior Nate Mohler, and sophomore Sydney Lanham signed "We love ASL" to the camera. American Sign Language had a new teacher this year, Delicia Huckleberry.

Sophomores Susan Rupley, Katie Csenar, and Sabrina Schuchard worked together in their English class to create a poster of their plans for survival after they lived through a fictional plane crash and landed on an island. The girls were optimistic and excited to work on their tans!

Junior Allie Vanhyfte happily took a bite out of her King Cake. The French class was given this delicious treat in celebration of Mardi Gras, the Tuesday before Ash Wednesday.

Sophomore Alex Traxler worked in the newly improved language learning lab. All the computers were replaced along with the headphones to make the learning experience the best it can be. Every foreign language student spent time in the lab, taking their learning further than before.

Lana Pletcher, junior, Tiegan Ash, sophomore, Mark Dinger, senior, Candy Baecher, junior, and sophomores, Olivia Quirk and Ian Jacobs modeled fashions in Japanese II to show their understanding of vocabulary words such as "sukaato wo haiteimas" ("I WEAR THE SKIRT").

Troy "Bearpaw" Lower, senior, showed off the quiver that he made out of deerskin. A quiver holds the arrows when hunting with a bow. Lower, who was in the AP sculpture class, said, "I actually killed that deer."

Christie Pierce, senior, set up her station in the photography darkroom. Pierce was in the advanced photography class. "Every single second has its own unique light, grey, color, texture, and mood. Your life is not going to wait for your camera, or it's rules and fooling around involved," she said.

Seniors Natalie Noonan and Chelsea Perryman worked on their slab pockets in Ceramics I. "The class lets my creative side come out," said Noonan.

Penncasso

Creating A Masterpiece

AP sculpture students Danny Stackowicz, Conor O'Toole, and Kyle George, seniors, worked on their stone carvings. In the AP class, students were able to work with many different types of mediums, including stone, clay, and plaster.

Junior Andrew Szrom worked on a self portrait in the 2D-3D art class. Szrom said, "My favorite thing about this class was the skeleton project. And the fact that we don't get homework."

Senior Sarah Horn worked on a pottery wheel making a bowl. She was in the advanced ceramics class, which gave her more independence. Horn was an enthusiastic advocate for the class, saying, "You get to make what you want, glaze how you want, and use it the way you want."

Cort Stonehill, sophomore, worked diligently on his wire sculpture in sculpture I. "The best thing about this class is the teacher, Beth McKechnie, she really makes the class fun," he said.

Ruby Parikh, senior, and Lindy Goddard, junior, admired some of the fantastic artwork in the show case down the art hallway. Parikh said, "I love the artwork in the hallways. The amount of talent at Penn is impressive and amazes me year after year."

Senior Sarah McNerney and junior Stephanie Marysz wrapped Christmas presents together after parading through the mall one afternoon. Students take field trips to the mall every year before Christmas to buy presents for their family members. It was a good way for students and peer leaders to interact outside of a classroom setting.

School resource officer John Radde and freshman Kevin Smith are great friends. Kevin enjoyed riding in Radde's police car and made sure he said "hi" to Radde each time he passed his office.

Jonathon Dickey, freshman, and special education teacher, Linda Dunlap, worked together on some math. Working on an assignment with one another is a great way for students to ask questions when needed, and get the assignment done on time.

The class posed for a group picture before reading time. Although there are not many students in the class, it is an advantage because it enables peer leaders as well as the teachers to interact closely with all the students.

Freshman Clare Higdon wrapped gifts to give to her family. Clare bought her brother a Bob Marley t-shirt for Christmas. Clare's favorite part was being able to hang out with all her friends at her favorite hang out, the mall.

Senior Stephon Curry showed his ability and improvement while demonstrating the proper technique of doing a pull up. "I'm loving it; stay fit or quit," he said.

Senior Adam Weaver attempted to make a pass to one of his classmates in the pool. "I like swimming because it keeps you in shape. It also gives you a nice and toned body, as you can see," he said.

Sophomore Julian Moore worked his triceps during fitness class. "I'm so thankful to Tyler Gregory for pushing me and making me the best I can be!" he said.

Freshman Nathanael Cox got ready to pass the ball off to start an intense game of rugby. "I like gym a lot. It's a lot of fun because of all of the cool sports we get to play," he said.

Freshman Matt DeGeyter skated while in the fitness center in gym class. "Skating is cool if you don't fall," he said.

Push It To The Limit

Posters placed on the health room walls give students realistic examples of the consequences of smoking. "Those pictures really put things into perspective. It's much easier to say no to smoking things like gasoline or rat poisoning than a normal cigarette," said junior Mike Walker.

Junior Ben Piotrowski showed his dedication and strength for working out. "Fitness class helps me get bigger and stronger for football," he said.

Sophomore Lindsay Miller listened to one of the guest speakers who came in to talk to the class. Many guest speakers come and educate students on things such as how unsafe it is to drink and drive.

Junior Seth Siders listened to a lecture from his health teacher. "At first I thought I wouldn't like health class, but after I learned so many things that could benefit me in the future I thought it wasn't too bad," he said.

Sophomore Austin Solliday maxed out on the leg press at 125 pounds in fitness class. "No one got ahead by sitting on their behind," he said.

Senior foreign exchange student Tina Boehm removed a hem in her sewing class. She gained much knowledge about American fashion and hopes to demonstrate it in her finished product.

A team of students prepared a craft for the Penn preschool. Students plan activities and songs before the children attend.

US History teacher Dominic Ball led juniors in the mock election of 1912. Lucas Daggy, Anna Burk, Richard Gunn, Matt Murphy, Steven Depositar, Josh Startup, and Grace Brenneman awaited their turn to speak. Each student represented either a candidate or a progressive from the election.

Wearing cowboy hats and boots and waving an American flag, Adam Penn, John Green, and Steven Depositar represented those who supported the unpopular Vietnam War in the 1960s and 1970s.

Every May, Pennstock commemorated the sixties and the Woodstock Music Festival. US History students study political and cultural events and prepare brochures on famous persons such as Malcolm X and Richard Nixon. Pennstock was held on the Monday after prom to discourage juniors from cutting school.

Ricky Hester, junior, took on the important role of Theodore Roosevelt during the mock election of 1912.

Seniors Megan Werling and Alan Reeder played Goverenmentland in Lori Pettine's government class. The students use the game to review for tests.

Although it threatened to rain early in the day, the skies stayed clear for Pennstock. Lauren Sweeney, junior, dances, just like concert goers did at Max Yasgur's farm at the Woodstock Music and Art Fair in Bethel, New York, in 1969.

Foreign exchange students posed with the Kingsmen, their new American mascot: Ana Sbizera of Brazil, Lucie Banthien of Germany, Maria Luisa Francia of Italy, Constanza Carcamo Asem of Chile, Erik Matzenbacher of Brazil, Tina Boehm of Germany, Martin Ryden of Sweden, and Malene Rohden of Denmark.

While Erik Matzenbacher and Martin Ryden were the jokesters of the bunch, Matzenbacher tried to be somewhat serious about his experience when he said, "The things I'm going to miss are the friends that I hope to have, the big carb, peanut butter, and the culture."

While students did not get to choose their destinations, Coni Carcamo Asem and Clay exchange student did not hesitate to travel outside of rural Indiana and visit big cities, like Indy and Chicago.

Erik Matzenbacher, Tina Boehm, and Martin Ryden enjoyed dining in Indianapolis. They ventured outside of Granger and Mishawaka to get a taste of city life in both Indy and Chicago.

Erik Matzenbacher, Malene Rohden, and Constanza Carcamo Asem became close friends through their exchange experience. Rohden said, "We had the opportunity to learn about other exchange students and American culture."

Malene Rohden demonstrated her newly acquired school spirit during one of Penn's football games. All of the foreign exchange students were quick to notice the amount of school spirit Penn had to offer. Rohden said, "You got so much more school pride!"

This mix of Penn students and foreign exchange students was all smiles. Most exchange students agreed with Lucie Banthien who said, "I'm happy to be here even if it is sometimes hard." Erik Matzenbacher said, "People need to be more open. Sometimes you feel alone.'

Many of the exchange students went all out for their first American Halloween. It was the perfect opportunity for Martin Ryden to follow through with his comedic American goal of "getting fat." Ryden said, "The best holidays are Halloween and Thanksgiving because of the candy and turkey."

Malene Rohden, Tina Boehm, and Penn student Cecelia Witous took great interest in American culture and embraced popular traditions. They made sure to catch all of Penn's football games.

Exchange students Erik Matzenbacher, Martin Ryden, and Tina Boehm traveled to Indianapolis for the International Festival along with Clay foreign exchange students from Indonesia and Ukraine. Boehm said "I come from Germany and lots of things are different, even things that seemed so normal!"

MOVE ALONG

Freshman JV soccer player, Nathaniel O'Dea, learned that "getting to know people and making friends" is really what being in a Penn sport is all about.

There are three qualities that senior basketball player, Caleb Laidig, believes you must master when playing a difficult sport. They are "time management, dedication, and commitment."

What made senior Kelsey Labrum proudabout playing on the volleyball team was hat the team had a "sisterhood bond and that [they] are a team, not just individuals competing for one goal."

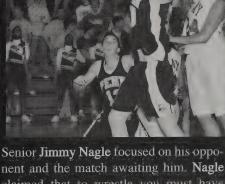

All-state junior Braxton Cave claimed that he rarely got nervous about the pressure of starting a play. "I don't really think about anything. I just zone out all the distractions and just play my game, said Cave.

Senior Megan Friedli reached out to congratulate her teammate while basking in the glory of beating their biggest rival Northridge.

Fellow swimmer Zac Papczynski, senior, exclaimed with excitement for winning his event. Papczynski admitted that he wouldn't have been able to compete in such a difficult sport as swimming without "discipline and responsibility.

Tony Bodle, junior, waited in anticipation for the puck to come to him. Bodle has been playing the game of hockey since he was four years old. Besides playing hockey, he also plays football and rugby Varsity basketball player, junior Lily Svete, stated that "having confidence in yourself will make you a successful basketball player." Athletics Invited

Charlie Olson, junior, concentrated on making a perfect shot. The class enjoyed the basketball unit. "The student's reaction to making a basket is enough to melt your heart," said adaptive physical education teacher Henry Wilk, who retired this year. "Every day was like a breath of fresh air."

Stephanie Marysz, junior, knew how important stretching is to the overall gym experience. Henry Wilk was the example to follow as he guided the class.

Junior Stephanie Marysz lined up her golf shot on one of the outings to Nick's Golf. The sun was shining and the birds were singing, and Stephanie's shot was right on the money.

Michael Robben, sophomore, took aim as the class practiced free throws in the basketball unit. Basketball helped the students focus as they continued to practice. In his remarks upon his retirement, Henry Wilk thanked division leader Cindy Theophilus for the opportunity to teach this class.

Students huddled together around Dawn Bernaert as a team for some group encouragement before the end of the class.

Freshman Amber Weaver lined up her shot while John Dickey, freshman, and Quinton Voorde, sophomore, looked on. Respect was a huge part of doing well in this class. Upon his retirement, Henry Wilk extended special thanks to team teacher Christine Simper for her expertise and passion. Wilk wrote, "You made me a better teacher and the lessons I learned from this class were priceless."

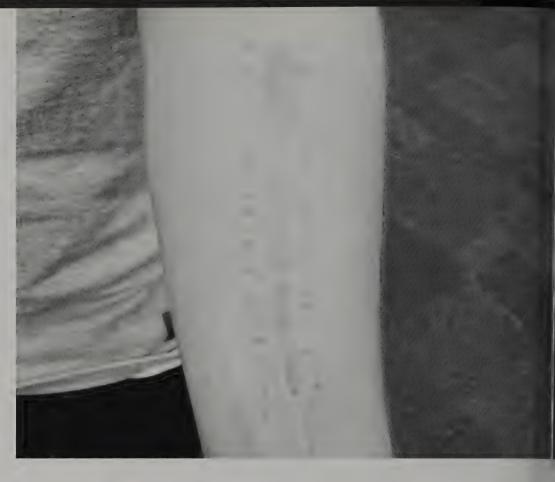

Bob Lawton, junior, settled down into the seat of the motorcycle. The class had several outings like this one to Club 15 for a golf outing. The class enjoyed these outings very much.

Senior David Burnside stood proudly in his graduation mortarboard and letter jacket. Kathy Reinhardt, Lou Moore, Carl Holt, and Pat Leslie greatly appreciated David's work. Because of his work ethic, David was also hired at Meijer.

Andy Vavul, senior, shows off his scar on his left forearm. He broke his arm in seventh grade and has had two surgeries since. The scar shows the marks of the some 35 stitches on the top of his arm. He also has a scar on the bottom since he broke both arms.

United We Stand

The 2006 season started with a bang for the Penn Kingsmen, as they pummeled Valparaiso 61-14. The Kingsmen, who returned 14 starters, ended their regular season with an overall record of 7-2 and an NIC record of 6-0. Both the offense and the defense had successful regular seasons. The offense scored a total of 339 points while the defense only allowed a total of 143 points. Northern Indiana Conference Most Valuable Player Nick Keim, senior, led the offense as the quarterback, and passed for a total of 1553 yards and 17 touchdowns. Senior leaders Danny Williams, Caleb Laidig, Blain Frick, Alex Pajakowski and junior Braxston Cave all received first team All-NIC honors by displaying leadership in a year where character and resolve was the story line of the season. After tough regular season losses to Ben Davis and St. Ignatius of Cleveland, Penn bounced back to continue its domination in the NIC by winning the conference. Penn's season ended with a loss to LaPorte, 27-7 in sectionals.

The season may not have ended how we wanted it to, but we all madefriendships that will last a lifetime.

After the Kingsmen won a game, the football team celebrated victory with their friends, family, and supporters. "Even though the season didn't end exactly the way we wanted it, the seniors still had the experiences of state and the playoffs in the past years, and no one can take that away from them," said head coach Cory Yeoman.

Gunn was a major contributor for the offense, averaging 5.9 yards per carry and a total of seven touchdowns. "At the end of the year we put it together at the right time going into the playoffs but it just didn't happen," said Gunn.

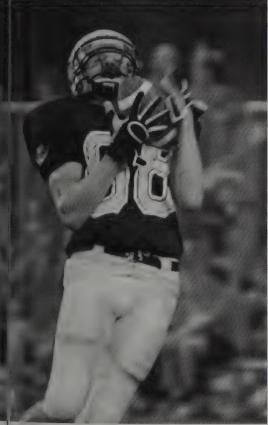

The Twin Towers, Caleb Laidig and Brandon Miller, seniors, watched their teammates from the sidelines as they prepared to go in on offense. Laidig earned an average of 21.6 yards per catch and had a total of eight touchdowns, which contributed a total of 50 points in the regular season.

The defensive huddle led by Blain Frick, senior, was a huge factor in the Kingsmen season. Their defense was led by its experience, speed, and agility. "The memories I had from Penn were some of the greatest, and if I could go back and do it all over again I would in an instant," said Frick.

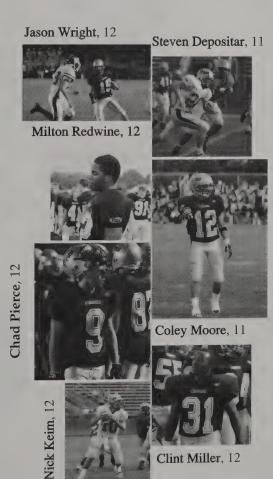

Chaz Reeves, senior, made a tackle for the Penn defense. "I'm going to miss running onto the field with my friends because there's no other feeling than the anticipation and electricity in the air," said Reeves.

Pain and Grasstains

The season ended perfectly for the JV and freshmen teams this year. Both teams worked hard, whether it was off season or not, pushing themselves and encouraging their teammates. The teams improved themselves by working in the weight room and practicing over the summer with two-a-days. Their hard work and dedication contributed to the victories both teams experienced. The playing experience the guys received this year was the key ingredient needed to work their way up to the varsity level. Even during the off season, all Penn football players had to work out four days per week to get stronger and faster for the upcoming season. The motivation behind the players was the drive to succeed where others could not. It is not all hard work and seriousness, though, according to freshman Ross Merrill. "Our coaches were crazy fun," Merrill stated. Judging by their 9-0 record, the coaches and players were able to strike a good balance between work and play. Overall, the season showed that no matter how fast, what grade, age, height, and weight you were, the expectation is not on the player, it's on the position.

Freshman Austin Kunze and junior Sean McFarland pushed themselves to force the turnover. This pair put everything that they learned in practice on display.

A quick huddle always helped raise team morale. Planning their strategy did not fail the freshmen and JV football teams this year as they both finished with perfect records.

Loud and Proud

Not only did the varsity cheerleaders bring tremendous spirit to our football team, but they also pumped up our crowd. They did a lot more than just cheer, they also put a lot of money and time into our football program. Before the first playoff game of the year the girls made pillowcases for our senior football players, every week after that they put together little tokens to show appreciation to the seniors. They made cookies, filled pumpkins with candy, decorated picture frames, and decorated the locker room. They also had squad sleepovers, and the Thursday before every game they enjoyed team dinners. These fun events helped the girls' friendships grow as well as their team unity. The 2006 cheerleaders worked hard to help the Kingsmen fight their way to many victories. The nine seniors, Ashley Coe, Bridgette Hill, Ally Holland, Rachel LeClere, Cara McGuin, Amanda Miller, Stephanie Miller, Natasha Trozzolo, and Megan Willkom, who led the cheerleaders this season will be greatly missed.

This stunt, "Paperdoll" was varsity's favorite stunt this year. To many squads this stunt would be very challenging, but to our girls, it's a piece of cake. After forty hours of practicing during two-a-days in the summer, JV and varsity perfected this stunt and made it their own.

The entire varsity squad, along with JV, watched the football game against Ben Davis, a heated rivalry. The Kingsmen have not beat Ben Davis since 2002 at their home field in Indianapolis. This game was much anticipated due to the hype of our fans.

Together We Can

The freshmen squad is formed by three middle school squads, Grissom, Discovery, and Schmucker. Previous middle school squads had twenty or more, and the combined groups equaled to sixty-plus. These potential high school cheerleaders were stripped down in April of their eighth grade year to form a unified squad of seventeen. The chosen girls spent their entire summer getting into shape and bonding to form a base group of friends to enter high school with. This was an experience that many girls wanted; the freshmen cheerleaders formed memories and accomplished goals that improved their abilities. The girls held on to what they could because they are not guaranteed a spot next year on JV. Next year they must try out and compete against not only each other, but junior girls. More than half of the previous freshmen cheerleaders are cut and the rest join with the junior girls to form the junior varsity squad. The junior varsity squad cheers on Friday nights with the varsity and participates in all the traditions between the cheerleaders and the football team.

Even though we're on JV it's fun getting to know the younger girls and both squads work well together.

Power and Grace

The 2006 season for the Marching Kingsmen brought with it new excitement. This year's theme was Power and Grace and featured selections from The Firebird Suite by Igor Stravinsky and Tchaikovsky's Swan Lake. After two months of work and performances, the Marching Kingsmen came out with the highest placement at state in final's history. Finally breaking into the top five with a fifth place ranking, the Marching Kingsmen had their best season ever. The four drum majors, Becky Gerber and Ally Tharp, juniors, and Wes McGinnis and Kerry Rutkowski, seniors, were proud to accept the fifth place trophy in the RCA Dome in Indianapolis. All members of the band were very proud of their finish this season. Junior Ally Hellyer stated, "I love band. Band is like my family." Junior drum major Tharp said, "This season was a great one for me because I got so much closer with my friends, and we placed so well. We accomplished all of our goals as a team." The Marching Kingsmen also traveled to Philadelphia and performed in the ABC Boscov's Thanksgiving Day Parade.

How well we placed was just an added bonus to all the amazing memories," Werling stated.

Freshman Brittany Davis listened intently to her conductors at practice. Discipline, practice and great conductors are a perfect combination for a successful marching band. Davis said, "Band is really amazing. At first I was nervous, but it was gone quickly. It was like being in one big family."

Seniors Andy Waldenmeyer, Ryan McGrail, and TJ Schmidt take a break and watch the Purdue drum line play. At the end of the homecoming game the Kingsmen drum line tried to out play the Purdue drum line. The drum line is very entertaining and the students love watching them play at the end of the football games.

The Kingsmen band marched out on the track at Freed Field for their first performance of the year. Nervousness and excitement were the feelings for many of the new members. However, as soon as they hit the field all of their fears vanished and it was the beginning of many new and lasting memories. Freshman Morgan Crane stated, "Being only a freshman I didn't really know what to expect. At first I was really nervous, but as the season went on I got less nervous."

en Kerry Rutkowski takes a break from conducting try tice. The band practices many hours every night the shool to improve their skills. Rutkowski has been drumajor for the past two years and a member of the nar ing band since her freshman year. "I wouldn't be vhc am if I wasn't involved in the marching band."

Colors of the Spin

Their summers were not spent at the movies or laying out at the beach. Instead each member of color guard dedicated their summer to twelve hour practices, which forced them to become better and work harder. Performing to both the Firebird Suite and Swan Lake, color guard's choreography matched the music with the theme Power and Grace. When asked, most of the girls said that people didn't appreciate how much work they put into color guard and how difficult it really is. "You have to remember eight minutes of work and drill, and remember it all correctly," stated Kristiane Weeks, sophomore. The girls also agree that color guard can be dangerous. "We aren't very girly...we get injured at least once a day, but we keep going. We can take pain pretty well," said Kelsey Thompson, sophomore. Proving their hard work, color guard placed second at their competition at Homestead and ended up in fifth place at state.

The Fairest of the Fairway

The Penn girls' golf team surpassed all expectations this season. Even though they were a young team, with little competitive golf experience, their hard work and positive attitude paid off. They swung their hearts out during the regular season, ending with ten wins and only two losses. The team tasted their first sweet victory, winning the New Prairie Invitational. Elissa Gennicks, junior, and Meghan McNerney, sophomore, tied for runners-up as individuals overall with a score of 44. Coach Jim Garrett provided entertainment for the girls on the team, as he was never afraid to burst out in his own renditions of various songs. Implementing his own unique teaching style, Coach Garrett would create his own lyrics to "Shoulder Lean" by Young Dro featuring TI to help the girls remember the proper golf stance. Another song he made his own was "Bossy" by Kelis. He substituted his own personal lyrics, which remained the team joke throughout the season. Coach Garrett, though eccentric, proved that there is a method to his madness when he won National Coach of the Year for 2005.

You Win Some, You Lose Some

Although the team didn't do as well as they hoped with an NIC record of 5-3, the determination and effort shown by the boys' varsity soccer team was phenomenal. Penn's greatest accomplishment of the season was defeating Lake Central, the team ranked 14th in the state, during their last game of the season before sectionals. The team's greatest strength throughout the season was the extreme energy they brought to every game. When the team lost, it was only after they exhausted all of their assets and when the team won, they earned every second of the victory. While the team was under the direction of new coach Larry McClements this year, who won the coach of the year award and a national championship at Bethel College, the Penn varsity soccer team was bound to have a rocky start after losing fifteen seniors last year. Left with only seven seniors this year, the underclassmen had to take on more responsibility, as well. Sophomore Aaron Fisher, shown midair to the right, demonstrated the underclassmen initiative as a starting player with only two years at Penn under his belt. However, with all of the setbacks the team had to face, they made the effort to return to the competitive level they were at last year and came as close to their goal as possible. The season ended with the emergence of special bonds between each player, which was a slow process but inevitable in the end.

This year was a huge transition from losing fifteen seniors. It helped to have an experienced coach with a not-so-experienced team. The underclassmen really stepped up when they had to, which gave the team the ability to play to our full potential. Alex Pieri, senior

On senior night the team made a special tribute to senior Sean Gonderman, who broke both his tibia and his nose halfway through the season. The team felt the loss of their teammate, whose injuries prevented him from finishing the season altogether. While Gonderman could not play, he supported his team all the way through the NIC tournament.

"For a young team, we progressed really well and by the end of the season we started playing more like team."

Brice Wozniak, senior, maneuvered the ball away from his opponent as he defended the goal. The team looked up to Wozniak along with co-captain senior Andrew Luttrell for team spirit to drive the team forward. About being a leader, Wozniak said, "This year was super rad being a leader. Wozniak was awarded honorable mention along with sophomore, Austin Hiatt, who was placed on second team NIC.

Senior Sean Gonderman passed his fellow teammate, sophomore Matt Gradeless, as they tore down the field toward the goal. "Even though I didn't get to play in the Lake Central game, I was impressed with our team's performance," said Gonderman.

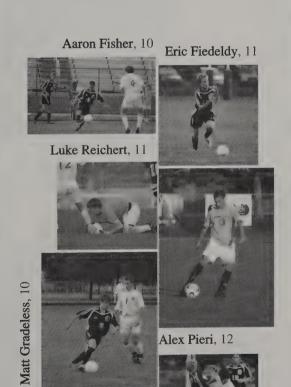

Senior Andrew Luttrell fought to keep the ball away from two of the Blue Blazers from Elkhart Central. This was one of the toughest games of the season. Luttrell was placed on the first team NIC.

Senior Dillon Gonderman ran ecstatically to his teammates to celebrate a goal against Clay. Although they were victorious against Clay, Gonderman commented on sectionals saying, "It was really hard as a senior to get upset so early in sectionals."

Sen r Alex Pieri, a leading defender for Penn along with ellow senior Brice Wozniak, stole the ball with a slid ackle. This being his signature move, Pieri spent ust; much of playing time tackling his opponents and slid g on the ground as he did playing on his feet.

Jun r Eric Fiedeldy, like the rest of his teammates, was not fraid to fight for the ball. After losing fifteen sen rs the year before, the team could not afford to hold bac luring the games. However, developing the team's bor outside of games took more patience. Fiedeldy 'It's been slow, but our team has come together."

Shin Guards and Battle Scars

Few junior varsity teams inspired so much hope for the future as the 2006 boys' JV soccer squad. Their success showed signs of a promising group of underclassmen and a talented varsity team in the years to come. The boys' team, known for their stellar defense and electrifying goals, brought a flurry of excitement to fans who showed up in numbers unknown to JV soccer before them. Though their 8-4-1 record might be impressive by itself, one must note that they went through a tough conference schedule undefeated. Plus, half of their losses came during one tournament in Fort Wayne. Sophomore Brad Sperry commented on the team's success. "The year before we were just a bunch on individuals, but this year we became truly a team, and I think that showed in our record," he said. Just because their season ended didn't mean that the team stopped growing, either. During the offseason, many of the boys could be seen up in the fitness center bulking up and staying in shape for the upcoming season. This team set its goals high and put in the effort to achieve them, which is what led to their success.

Freshman Weston Craker battled for the ball to get it away from his opponent. Craker, whose older brother Evan played for the varsity squad, thought he was off the team when at tryouts his coach overlooked his name on the list. Luckily for Weston--and for the team--the coach caught his error soon after.

Junior Patrick Green dribbled up the sideline after he stole the ball from an opposing player. Green grew as a player and played in many positions throughout the year. Halfway into the season Green got moved up to the varsity squad. Green was known for his outrageous shoes that were full of colors.

One Team. One Dream. One Reason. One Season.

"One team, One dream, One reason, One season," was the team motto this year for the 2006 Lady Kingsmen girls' varsity squad as they completed yet another successful season. Although the girls experienced a disappointing loss in sectionals, no one can say they were not an amazing team. Their record in the NIC was 7-1, and for the fourth straight year the girls have captured the title as the Northern Indiana Conference Champions. Overall, their record including all tournament games came to 14-5. Although the team was led by seven seniors this year grade levels never mattered. "I think our team really bonded this year. We had good team chemistry. People could not tell what grade we were in because we were all friends," said sophomore Sarah Blaase. Outstandingly the girls out-scored their opponents 57-11. Sophomore Kate Buhr, along with help from junior Alyssa Johnston, and senior Corissa Hart led the team in goals. The team as a whole had a great attitude throughout the whole season. They won together and lost together. Despite the outcome, the 2006 girls soccer team is a team to recall. They will be remembered on and off the field.

We were the closest team we've ever been because we saw each other as equals. We created friendships on and off the field.

The junior varsity and C team completed another successful year in girls' soccer. Under the leadership of new coach Phil Weber, the JV team recorded one of the best records in Penn High School history. "Coach Weber made sure everyone knew specifically what was asked of them," said sophomore Emily Ducoffe. The JV team allowed few goals the entire season with a strong defense and the help from three important keepers: freshmen Jordan Jayme, Haley Craig, and sophomore Sabrina Schuchard. "This year we focused a lot on defense which will be helpful for everyone next year," said JV freshman Nicole Ditto, defender. Another freshman Brenna Gonderman added, "We didn't know much about positioning, but with Coach Weber's help we were able to learn the proper technique." The JV team went to face Trinity's varsity team and were expected to lose, but ended up beating them. "The Trinity game was the game that our whole team came together. We all pushed ourselves really hard and won 4-2 in double overtime," commented Ducoffe. The C team was led by coach Jodi Foster.

This past year was an amazing year for the boys' tennis team. The team made it all the way to semistate before losing to Munster. Their overall record for the season was 18-3. The team was devoted to practice and to strengthening each others' friendships. Seniors T.J. Snelson and Gautham Vaidyanathan made it to the state finals for doubles and won an impressive state championship. The seniors really deserved this win after getting state runners-up the past two years and losing in semistate this past year. During the state championship, the two of them only lost one match. Junior Troy Brinker also went to state as a singles player; however, he faced a disappointing loss in the first round of play. Overall the season was a success in that the team had a satisfying season with more positive moments to reflect on than negative ones. As a result, the morale was high on the team and the performance was excellent throughout. Brinker was named MVP for the NIC first team. Vaidvanathan and Snelson also made first team. Andy Hansen was named to the second team all NIC as well.

Everything about the experience was amazing. I wanted to cry myself, when Gautham and T.J. won state, but that might've looked weird.

Senior T.J. Snelson motivated his fellow teammates in preparation for the upcoming match. With doubles teams making up half the matches, trust and unity were key factors in the team's success this season.

"OHHH, 1, 2, 3. . .KINGSMEN!" This is the team chant that got the boys' cross of team pumped and ready for each race. The team grew excited and the anticipatio increased as the race was about to start. Who knew that a simple act such as gr together and putting arms around each other helped the team focus on their determ level, and what they needed to do to be successful.

It was a wild ride for the boys' cross country team this year. This season began in a state of uncertainty as the team got their second new coach in two seasons. But the team persevered through early emotional battles to gain unity and trust as a team. Last season was rough and the team failed to make it out of sectionals for the first time in about 15 years. However, through hard running and lots of determination, the Kingsmen, led by three junior runners, ran all the way to semi-state. Armed with a slew of new runners, new coaches, and a new attitude, the Kingsmen went 5-1 in regular season and finished third in conference and regionals, and second at sectionals. There were few injuries this year, a problem that plagued the team last year. After a semi-state berth this season, the team is now looking forward to next season because all varsity runners will be returning and will make it their goal to get to the state championship.

The start of a race is as intense as the last few minutes when everyone is crossing the finish line. Jake Lovett, junior, caught his breath after finishing a hard race. Lovett commented on the season, "I improved this year along with the team as a whole. We made it to semi state and we hope to make it to state next year."

Daniel Howard, sophomore, kept his focus and balance during the race. Howard said, "I really enjoyed running my first year of cross country. It was fun to try something new other than soccer and it helped me stay in shape."

Nothing Runs Like a Kingsmen

The Penn girls' cross country team finally hit their stride with their new coach, Keri Eby. The seniors have had three different coaches in their four years on the team. With each new coach came a new style of leadership, and the girls had to adjust to the changes. The changes this year, though, were for the better. Coach Eby's attitude can only be praised because her effective ways of coaching have helped the girls win the NIC meet and push them to reach their goals. Christine Cummings, senior, has nothing but appreciation for the new leader, "Coach Eby has been a wonderful, energetic, motherly leader, and I hope she stays for several years." Eby's energy for the team not only helped the girls improve in their running, but helped to draw the team closer. Senior Elizabeth High said, "This experience has been unforgettable and life-changing. The friends I have made and the bonds I formed will remain a part of me for the rest of my life."

The start of the race is usually the most nerve-wracking part, so the team looked to their new coach to take their mind off of their nerves. Senior Whitney Cullen expressed her gratitude by saying, "A spunky personality is really what I needed before each race and that's what Coach Eby gave me."

Deborah Wei, senior, took a moment to catch her breath after running a difficult course. With the help of her coach, Wei was able to keep an enthusiastic attitude throughout the season. Wei gave a valiant effort to maintain her top twelve runner position, and broke her personal record this season.

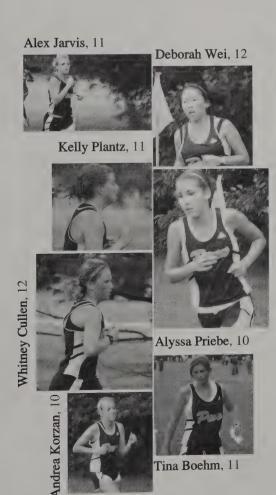

Freshman Bailey Landis saw the finish in sight as she continued running on the last stretch of grass. Seeing the finish line was just the push the girls needed to finish strong. Landis anticipates her next three years: "My first year was awesome I can't wait for next season to start!"

The girls' cross country team gathered in front of Coach Eby as she said a few words before the day's race. It was important for each member to mentally prepare themselves. Running longer distances required not only physical endurance, but also the will to finish. Coach Eby's words of motivation helped the girls get pumped up before the race.

Serving the Best

The 2006 varsity volleyball team not only dominated the Northern Indiana Conference but also were sectional and regional champions. Winning the Sectional was one of the many exciting moments during the season. In order to win the Sectional, the girls demolished Elkhart Central in three games, and defeated Elkhart Memorial in five games. The Kingsmen proved to be the stronger team in the end and walked away with the trophy and one step closer to the IHSAA State Championships. The season started out great, until the team suffered a pivotal loss to the St. Joseph Indians. The practices became harder than ever and the team resurfaced with a new attitude and intensity. The hard work paid off and the Kingsmen finished their season with a record of 31-8. "Anytime we can be playing on the last day of our sport it is very exciting. Our players used all of their talents and abilities to make their dream happen," said Coach Lisa Pawlik. "This is a year to remember and our returning team members are looking forward to carrying on our successful tradition."

Both the JV and Freshman teams' dedication and practice paid off as the JV team ended the season with 24 wins and 8 losses and the freshman team ended with 23 wins and 7 losses. Before the season even began, the girls put in long and early hours conditioning themselves for tryouts. When the final cuts were made, the excited new team members entered what the girls called a "sisterhood." For the freshmen, this was the first time experiencing such a bond. Throughout the season, they learned to depend on each other and act, in a sense, as sisters. Their bonding helped them succeed as a team and find out things they didn't know about each other. By the end of the season each member took the memories made and skills learned and were able to continue on after the season with a sense of pride and accomplishment. Freshman Andrea Forray valued her experiences on the team, "I love being able to play volleyball. I will always take with me the skills I've learned and the friendships I've made."

I just don't think about anything but volleyball, why I want to win, and what it'll take to get there.

We make it rain

The Penn varsity basketball team came out with an impressive season. The basketball team shared the NIC champion title with St. Joe, ending and winning the Sectional title with a record of 7-1. Having the majority of the players 6 feet and taller gave the Kingsmen a great advantage over most teams. Senior Caleb Laidig, a well-known player in the area, and the NIC player of the year, had a great season. Following Laidig in their many victories were seniors Danny Williams, Kyle Hakanen, and Jason Wright. Laidig was the Kingsmen's all around player. He could drive to the basket or pull up for the three ball. Williams was the big man who held it down in the post, and Hakanen's three ball was fire. Then, there was Wright; as the sixth man he did his part when he entered the game. Another big name that cannot be left out is sophomore Tommy Kurth. He was a clutch player for the team, who made plenty of baskets and game winning shots. As only a sophomore he played a big role for the team and he will be a great senior leader when the time comes.

The Penn Kingsmen junior varsity and freshmen boys' basketball seasons started rough, but saw success in 2006-2007. The junior varsity team, coached by Dan Berndt, finished with a 9-13 record, along with a championship in the Holiday Tournament in December. The freshmen boys' basketball team, coached by Joe Sierzputowski, was extremely successful as the Kingsmen had a 15 - 5 overall record including a 7-1 record in the Northern Indiana Conference. Freshmen such as Chris Chaffee, Jordan Brady, Matt Price, and Lee Jackowiak made the instant jump from freshmen Kingsmen to the JV team in their first year, while juniors such as Tyler Laidig played JV while being on the varsity squad, too.

Teamwork Makes the Dream Work

The girls' varsity basketball team topped off another successful season ending with a record of 16-7. The girls finished third in the conference with a record of 6-2. Although the Kingsmen lost a disappointing sectional match in the championship game, they put up a fight for the Memorial Chargers leaving the Chargers to only a four point win. The squad was led by four seniors, but they will tell you it was really a team effort. "It was a great season," said sophomore Kelsey Reynolds, "We went through some bumpy patches but we were able to get through that because of our great team chemistry." Despite those bumpy patches, the Lady Kingsmen had some notable accomplishments this year. During a tough match up against state champions, the Washington Panthers, who averaged seventy points per game, Penn's stellar defense held them down to just forty-seven points. Also three Lady Kingsmen were named to the Northern Indiana Conference teams. Senior Kate Jasinski and sophomore Reynolds were named to the NIC second team. while Lily Svete was named to the honorable mention team.

The Dean Team

There are 34 girls that devoted many nights a week to practice, games, and maintaining traditions to keep the boys they cheer for in high hopes of a great season. The goal for these girls was to pump up the crowd before and during games and to give encouragement to the boys that have worked hard all year to be number one. Most girls cheered during football season, too, which meant summer camps and training, but the few new girls that joined the squads were challenged with learning all the material in a matter of weeks. Somehow, every year, they pull it off. Every year new girls joined the squad, every year the girls risk new and harder stunts and every year they keep up the same traditions. Like football cheerleaders, the girls made pillowcases with pictures and memories from the season. Before every game the cheerleaders decorated the boys' locker rooms with posters, streamers, and signs of good luck. As Penn cheerleaders, they also got involved in the community. They helped out with events like the Silver Mile Health Fair and St. Joe County Dare Hayride. Without these girls the season would be dull and less colorful, for it's their bright smiles and excitement that make the ride worth while.

Show Stoppers

The 2006-2007 varsity and junior varsity pom pon squads were unforgettable this year. With six seniors on the varsity squad, the team will lose great leadership for the next season, yet there were many new faces on both squads. This year was a year of new things including new coaches, new uniforms, new poms, and an all around new way of running things. The girls became very close through summer camps, many hours of practice, and a winter clinic. In the summer all squads attend a week long NDA camp where they learned many difficult routines and worked on technique. They were also awarded for showmanship, leadership, and teamwork. Also in the summer, all three pom squads hosted a week long pom camp for K-12 students. They taught them the basics and a dance that was performed in front of the campers' parents on the last day. There was also a one day clinic in the winter similar to this. Poms created many everlasting friendships between the girls and taught them skills they will use for the rest of their lives, including leadership, cooperation, and patience. Poms is much more than dancing.

Poms was a really great experience. We all got frustrated sometimes but going out there and performing for people was what made it worth it.

Are You Ready?

From the early days in August until the end of February, the competition poms squad practiced many hours a week to put together a first place routine for competition against many talented squads around Indiana. With at least one competition a week the girls competed in front of judges and used critiques to improve the routine every week. Not only did they put on a great show at home basketball games, but they placed first in almost all their competitions and went to state. The young ladies finished off the season placing fourth at state. Junior Jenny Lindsay also placed second in the state for her solo, and the large group ensemble consisting of Jenny Lindsay, Lindsay Nyerges, Cayla Clark, Lauren Olson and Kaley Vance placed fourth at state also. This season was very successful for this talented group of girls, and they also built many friendships and had fun doing what they do best, dancing!

Save the Last Dance for Me

Although Winterguard is independent from Colorguard, its main purpose is to keep the performers constantly prepared for the fall season all throughout the year. Similar to Colorguard, the girls concentrate through tough practices every other day and are especially notorious for their twelve hour practices three days in a row at the end of Christmas break. The long and hard practices helped prepare the team for state competitions, including the Midwest circuit, which they traveled from Chicago to Dayton, Ohio. The team consisted of 17 girls and four boys who had close to ten competitions with their highest score at 82.0. Although Winterguard was coed this year, the dynamic team remained unchanged for the most part, considering that they all knew each other prior to the season; however, it did make practices more interesting.

Winterguard is like a small, close family who focused and dedicated their time for the performances. The hard work helped us work together and put on amazing shows.

teach young girls the fundamentals of twirling flags at the clinic that was held before the Winterguard home show. The young girls learned a short routine that included some of the most basic and beginner spins.

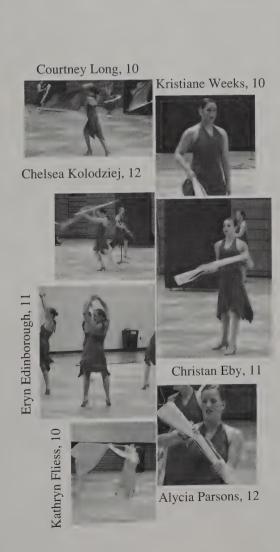

Alli Burnham, eighth, Maddie Crane, eighth, and Morgan Crane, ninth, practiced moves and proper techniques for Winterguard. This preparation helped them for Winterguard tryouts.

Senior Heather Block and sophomore Kristiane Weeks prepared themselves to run through a section of their routine which they still needed to tweak before competitions began. During practice, the coaches made it very common for the girls to run through specific sections over and over until the timing was perfect.

Milton Redwine, senior, ensured Pittsburgh, the I-ball championship team, a victory with his 15 points during one game. This was Redwine's first year playing I-ball.

Seniors Michael Jordan and Stephon Curry vigorously fought for the rebound during the sweet sixteen round of the tournament.

Trevor Strefling, junior, said, "I-ball's tight because it's not serious but it can be competitive." Strefling played the games with his close friends which was why they did so well.

I-Ballin'!

Due to the fact that there were not many girls' I-ball teams, competition was fierce The junior vs. senior rivalry sparked fire and fanned many heated games.

Senior Chad Plaia used his agility and advanced his team to the final two. Plaia played basketball at Penn for three years, and said "I enjoy I-ball because there's a lot of competition and you play just for fun."

Michigan-Utah State created official basketball names in order to categorize their basketball skills. This team's members were Andy Schaeffer, Nick Winovich, Jake Greenwell, Zach Schmucker, and Shiv Singh.

Junior Jay Hancock advanced the ball during an intense I-ball game. Hancock went on to lead his team to a hard-earned victory.

Juniors Nate Deleu and Tommy Lizzi flew high during tip off for the I-ball championship game. Due to height and extreme athletic ability Lizzi was able to out jump his opponent.

"I only played I-Ball for two years, but it was fun and I enjoyed it."

Chris Miller, senior

"There were so many positive experiences in my ten years of coaching, it's hard to single out just one," said Coach Dominic Ball, who is retiring from coaching girls' basketball. Ball coached area athletes in Sportsfest in June as his finale.

Terry Tulchinsky is retiring from coaching boys' golf after 16 years. "We had a perfect season. We met a couple of our goals that were big, such as winning the NIC and Sectional Championship, which is what we really wanted to accomplish at the end of a great season," said Tulchinsky.

"I will miss the kids the most, because it keeps me young," said retiring teacher and girls' tennis coach Vaughn Smith. Smith coached girls' tennis for 28 years, earning over 400 wins.

Henry Wilk knew he was destined to be a high school wrestling coach since his championship match in high school: "When I became the first state wrestling champion at Mishawaka High School, my coach Al Smith uttered the words that I will never forget: 'Now you can go on to coach young men to become champions."

Teacher and Coach Appreciation

Jacquelyn Reilly retired after devoting 37 years. She sums up her experience in one small poem:

The Best Part of Teaching
The best part of teaching
Is the splash of wonder
When the gale of the Spirit
Blows the vessel of discovery
To such unexpected tension
That it breaks free
From the moorings of expected response
And sails to uncharted waters.

"In my 40 and one-half years working here it's been a great experience, and I've met a lot of wonderful people along the way," said freshmen biology teacher Rick Shearer, retiring after 41 years (34 in drivers ed!).

Barb Schalliol, a close friend of Gail Stricker, appreciated all of the time and energy Stricker gave to Penn High School. "We will never have another business teacher with two MBAs. We often wonder if we make a difference to our students. She is a very generous person, and I hope her students will look back and appreciate her generosity," commented Schalliol. Stricker taught for 24.5 years.

"Over the years many changes have taken place at Penn, but the students have always been great. I will miss working with the young people and the great staff," said Dee Beath, retiring after 41 years.

Backstroke, Breaststroke. Stroke of a Genius

At 5:30 a.m. on a Monday morning, most Penn students were fast asleep, covered in blankets and pillows. But for Penn swimmers and divers, that time was spent soaked in the Penn pool. "They say practice makes perfect, and we practiced a lot. I'm not saying we were perfect, but we were really close," commented senior swimmer Nick Dixon. All that practice paid off in terms of team success for the Penn boys, who finished up the season second in the conference and 22nd in the state. Led by NIC Most Valuable Swimmer, junior Andrew Elliott, six Penn swimmers were selected to the All-Northern Indiana Conference squads which made for a very deep team of swimmers in a not-so-deep pool. Out and above the water, the Kingsmen also enjoyed success as divers plummeted into the water. "Divers never get the respect that swimmers get," said senior diver Jeff Taelman, "even though we put in the same amount of effort." Whether they were in the pool or flipping above it, the boys' swimming and diving squads definitely put in the time and effort to succeed and it was evident in their results.

Our team wasn't as talented as teams in the past. but it was the most improved team we've ever had.

A Splash of Success

The Penn girls' swim team started the season out with a splash. The team was very successful and lost only one meet. Andrea Campeau, junior, looked back on the 2006-2007 season and recalled. "The highlight of my season was when we beat Northridge by only two points." After doing exceptionally well at Regionals, several girls earned the honor of traveling down to state to compete. Katie Grunawalt participated in the diving portion of the State meet receiving 20th place. The Medley relay consisting of Carly Dunn, Megan Friedli, Nikki Hubbard, and Campeau got eighth place in the state finals. Friedli. Campeau, Andrea Korzan, and Carly Dunn also participated in the 200 Free relay in the state meet and got 11th place. Participating in the State finals of the 400 Free relay, Friedli, Campeau, Korzan, and Dunn swam to 15th place. Nikki Hubbard, only a freshman, also swam the Fly, placing fifth, and the Breast, earning 11th. "I was really nervous at the State Meet, but it was fun because of all the people and the fun cheers," said Hubbard. This year ended on a high note for the swimmers and Coach Dan Vogelgesang who received the NIC Coach of the Year award.

Pin To Win

Determination is the key to success in this physically challenging sport. This season the varsity boys showed true determination in every practice and match. Coach Henry Wilk stated, "If it's one thing that the boys learned it is not to put limits on themselves. An example is how a kid on JV only wrestled one match the entire season. He wrestled against a kid from Marian and ended up dislocating his shoulder in this match. However, he ended up winning this match and didn't wrestle the rest of the season. Another example is when senior Jerimiah Maggart was down 4-2 while wrestling a kid ranked number one in the state and got his tooth knocked out. I was ready to forfeit the match, but Maggart ended up pinning the kid and winning third in the state." Members of the first team all NIC were seniors Chris Tanner, Travis Swihart, Tom Petko, and Matt Medow. The second team all NIC was made up of seniors Maggart and Alex Lee. Junior Cory Hildabrant and senior Jimmy Nagle received honorable mention.

This season the Kingsmen gave the Cavemen a Trent Reinoehl, 10 Chris Tanner, 12 Matt Medow, 1 run for their money, but the Cavemen came out on top and pulled through for a victory.

"After four years the tean was like a family. We al worked really hard together to achieve our individual goals."

Travis Swihart, senic

Senior Tom Petko attempted to roll over his opponent to get the pin. Petko has wrestled for Penn for three years. He wrestled in the 140 weight class and placed on the first team all NIC. Petko commented on the season, "Mental toughness was key this year because the practices were challenging."

Senior Miah Maggart smiled and showed off his missing tooth. Maggart went to state and received third place and came home without his front tooth. Maggart wrestled for Penn all four years. He is not continuing his wrestling career after high school.

nio Matt Medow pins his opponent using a double ck wing maneuver. Medow has wrestled for the ngs en all four years. "Wrestling requires more hard rk en any other sport. My first three years I est I on JV under three wrestlers that went to state. ucl vith the program and ended up winning the NIC rn lent, sectionals and qualifying for state. That's dic on," stated Medow.

Rough, Ready, Relentless

When you walk into the wrestling room after school on any given day, the first thing you might notice is the thick coating of steam and sweat blanketing the windows. This is living proof of the hard work and dedication that each wrestler gives every day for the good of the team. The Kingsmen JV wrestling team, comprised of freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, embodied the kind of work ethic and camaraderie essential to a successful team. "Our year was based on a lot of hard work," said sophomore Brad Wolff. "We all kind of came together and it didn't matter if you were a senior or a freshman. You were always pushed to work harder." Throughout the season, JV wrestlers continually improved and strived toward earning a highly contested spot on varsity. "The biggest obstacle they have to overcome is themselves," said Coach Scott Vandygriff. "Knowing that they may take their lumps this year, but the future is theirs." The team translated this philosophy into a record of 19 wins to only 3 losses. "Everyone stuck together this season," said freshman Mike Witous. "We were one team."

Wrestling with a dislocated shoulder is simple because pain is simply an element of wrestling.

Sean Bridges,

Richie Walag, junior, attempted to keep his opponent on his back by using a hold. Walag is a veteran wrestler, having competed for seven years. In addition to wrestling, Walag also plays baseball and runs track. "Cross country really helped me get in shape for wrestling season," he said.

Smoking the Competition on the Ice

This was another successful year for the Penn hockey team. After being runner up at state last year the team had a lot prove. The St. Joe tournament, which was hosted by St. Joseph school, was a major highlight this season. The Penn team won the tournament in triple over time with a shoot-out. They advanced to the city championship game after a spectacular come-from-behind win against Riley. The Kingsmen finished as runners up in the tournament losing to Marian. With the team's success the Kingsmen produced five first team all conference players, Jordan Menz, Blake VanDeVoorde, and Alex North, all seniors, along with juniors John Bowie, and Aaron Kiraly. Aaron Kiraly was also named as a Burger King athlete of the week in the month of February. Captain of the team senior Mike Coyne proved to be the leader that the team needed. Coyne was a role model to the rest of the team keeping them in line and always being positive. The Penn Gold team along with Brebeuf Jesuit received the Henry G. Schallert team Academic Award for being the two teams with the highest total combined team GPA, of 3.32, in the state of Indiana. Penn was the first public high school in Indiana to receive this honorable award. Seniors Dax Donati, Mike Coyne, and Blake VanDeVoorde were named to the Academic All State Team maintaining a 3.0 GPA and scoring at least a 1500 on the SAT II. The Kingsmen Gold team finished with an overall record of 24-13-6.

Building on the Dynasty

The Kingsmen came close to another trip to Victory Field in Indianapolis, but a come-from-behind victory by the Kokomo Wildkats in the semistate tourney stopped them the night before graduation.

Unranked Penn ended the season 25-8 after their loss to No. 3 Kokomo. Earlier in the day, the Kingsmen avenged a regular season loss to No. 1 ranked Crown Point, beating them 9-2. Led by Steve Depositar's two, the Kingsmen stole six bases. Depositar had 12 stolen bases for the season.

Coach Greg Dikos told the Elkhart Truth, "We don't have all-stars. We didn't have anyone drafted, but we have kids who play with a heck of a lot of heart. It's a testament to them how hard they battled. Unfortunately, you don't always win. I'm just extremely proud of this senior class."

Senior Mike Zuidema missed eight games due to mononucleosis, yet still ended the season with a .400 batting average and 12 stolen bases. "Mike is one of our best athletes, so I have to applaud him for his determination and courage," Dikos said. "At first, we didn't know how serious his condition really was. It was definitely scary."

Preparing for the Majors

The Penn Kingsmen junior varsity performed like champions in the 2007 baseball season. The Kingsmen went 27-0, tying a Penn JV record for most wins in a season as well as marking the second time in five years that the Penn JV went undefeated. The team was led by pitchers Garrick Dikos and Kyle Perry, both sophomores, and their combined record of 17-0 propelled the best Kingsmen team in years. The offense was equally amazing as the Kingsmen also stole a JV record of 130 bases in only 27 games this year. The team scored 10 or more runs in 20 of the 27 games they played this season, as well as hitting a .399 batting average as a team. "We were honestly just one dominant team," said sophomore Michael Keve.

A Season To Remember

This season was truly a roller coaster ride for the Lady Kingsmen softball team. The girls fought hard through all of the challenges this year brought, and ended with an outstanding record of 20-8-1. They won all but two games in the Northern Indiana Conference. Many girls received honors at the end of the season for impeccable efforts. Junior Monica Palicki was awarded to the second team as a utility player. Junior Heather Genovese was the third team shortstop. Senior Kristi Lafree and junior Alex Dunfee were both awarded to the first team as pitcher and catcher, respectively. Junior hot-hitter Ashley Carrico ended with a .560 batting average in the NIC. That was higher than anyone else's in the entire conference and landed her a spot on the first team as an outfielder. The Lady Kingsmen's final game this season for the sectional championship was one for the record books. It was a sixteen inning showdown versus the Elkhart Memorial Chargers ending with a score of 0-1. With games that normally ended after seven innings, the season's final game was unforgettable, even though it didn't end the way the girls had hoped. The roller coaster season was over, but for the Lady Kingsmen it was one they will always remember.

It was different not blowing out every team this year, but I liked the change of pace. Close games are more fun.

Batter Up!

The junior varsity lady Kingsmen softball team was a force to be reckoned with this season. With the team being so young it was a tough season but they learned a lot about playing as a team. This season was a rebuilding year and the team had to be flexible about playing and learning new positions. There were many injuries this season so they had to work extra hard at learning different positions. Coaches Dave Westburg and Ron Whittaker had their work cut out for them with many underclassmen, but they pulled through and made the season a blast for the girls. As a team the Lady Kingsmen had a significant improvement in their batting average. "My first year of softball has been so much fun! I can't wait until next season because I have met so many great people," freshman Aubrie Lane exclaimed. Having a lot of girls together on a travel team made it easier to gel together. The girls are all very anxious for next season and continuing their progress as a team.

Sophomore Kelsey Donigan leads off first base. Getting a good lead off can be very helpful to the base runner when trying to steal a base. "This season was really fun. We worked hard and it all payed off," Donigan stated.

Fre man pitcher Lindsey Martin warmed up on the sid of the field during the Mishawaka game. It's imp tant for every pitcher to take the proper warm-up pre utions so she doesn't injure her pitching arm.

Hot Shots

"For us to win four straight trophies [at the Kaeppler Memorial tournament] is a major accomplishment," said Penn coach Terry Tulchinsky, who retired at the end of the season, to the South Bend Tribune. "It is a tribute to Ben Bellville and Steve Spiritoso, who have been on each of those four teams. I've been a coach at Penn for sixteen years and we had won only one before this streak started. This was an accomplishment for these kids." Spiritoso continued, "Team depth was the reason Penn won. This is a great honor to win here. Bellville has played for four years and Rory Langton played solid today. We had a really good team effort." The golf season was very successful due to senior leadership from Spiritoso, Bellville, Langton, Ben Sheyko, and Joey Marosz. In addition to repeating in the Kaeppler, another season highlight was freshman Robbie Brown's "spectacular" play at the Flo Troeger Invitational. According to the Tribune, even though he was playing the back nine at Knollwood for the first time in his life, he tied Marian star Adam Sumrall and last year's state finalist Anthony Novak for the top score. Despite Brown's effort, the Kingsmen came in five strokes over Marian's 308.

Check It Out!

This year the senior captains for girls' lacrosse were Janice Rottenberg, Sarah Wisler, Ali DenOtter, and Megan Perecko. Each played an important leadership role on the team. They were good motivators in the hard times and great examples of perseverance. The team worked hard this year and ended the season with a record of 7-10 for the black team, and 4-4 for the gold team. They faced great competition from the northern Indiana teams. One of the black team's toughest opponents was Saint Joseph, to whom they lost in the first round of the state tournament. One member of the team, sophomore Sarah Feeley. was awarded the honor of all state. Overall, the year was successful in the relationships made and the camaraderie shown.

If at First You Don't Succeed. Try Again

Rugby is not a sport for the fainthearted. It's a sixty minute game filled with blood and bone-crunching collision. This year's rugby team showed how to play with heart, leading off to a great start at the annual Nash Bash Rugby Tournament in Tennessee, crushing their rivals, the Westerville Worms. Led by the physical play of the forwards and the leg of fly half Danny Iams, the team dominated 27-7. Later in the season, Iams, Kyle George and C.J. Oakley suffered injuries that postponed their season. Additionally, the Penn Rugby team lost seven players to U.S.A Rugby playing overseas in both Ireland and England. The biggest part of their season at Mid West was the return of all the players that were missed. Again with a full roster like Nash Bash, the Penn team swept the competition, outscoring their opponents 117-7 in four games. This gave the Penn Rugby team the first place bid in Mid West sending them to Salt Lake City, Utah, for the National Championship. There they went 2-1, placing third in the country, under Highland of Utah and Jesuit of Sacramento.

Tell Me A Winning Story

It has taken hard work and encouragement for the Penn girls' rugby team to result in what they have achieved. The team ended with a record of 9 wins and 3 losses. Overall, the girls' rugby team had a rewarding season and made new memories with fellow teammates. They also stated that they had learned many new skills that are not only useful in rugby, but also in life. "This season has required perseverance to get where we are. We've made many friends while playing rugby and it's fun to hang out with everyone," Alyssa Haithcox, sophomore, said. Many teammates believed in this statement that described the bonding relationship of teammates. The girls played numerous games, sometimes two a day. It took lots of practice and weekends that were spent running and doing drills.

Scoring a try was the reward from being in rugby. It showed how hard and dedicated I was to the game.

With great victory sometimes comes small disappointments. The 2007 Penn girls' tennis team experienced the highest of highs and most regrettable of lows this season. Despite having the NIC title stripped from their grasp due to technicalities, the team finished strong with an overall record of 14-4 and 8-2 in NIC play. Even with the setback, the team still felt they had a successful season. "We met all of our goals and had fun doing it, which was important too," said junior Cara Pond. In addition, they must say good-bye to Coach Vaughn Smith after 28 years under his guidance, as he retires at the end of this year. Smith leaves on a positive note, achieving his 400th win against Marian. The already strong team was bolstered by freshman phenom Johanna Manningham. Manningham, who also competes in tournaments outside of Penn, played singles in the top spot. Even with all the success of the 2007 season still fresh, Manningham is already looking ahead to next year. "We're losing a lot of fantastic seniors," she said. "We've got to do our best to step up, which will be hard, but I know we're ready for it.'

Goin' to the top

Although the Penn boys' track team didn't win all of the championships they wanted to, there were several individual achievements With every time of victory there is a time of rebuilding, but the Kingsmen didn't let that define their season. "The guys really stepped up to the competition this year," said senior Jimmy Nagle, "there is a lot of younger talent, and they'll be able to show that next year." The four captains, Clint Miller, Milton Redwine, Brandon Miller, and Jimmy Nagle, showed great leadership helping several of the athletes reach their new personal records, including a new school record in the 100m dash set by Clint Miller. The hard work shown throughout the season helped ten individuals advance to the Kokomo Regional, and one advancement to the IHSAA state meet in Bloomington. The motto of the season, "Goin' to the top," is exactly the kind of attitude that the Kingsmen needed to make it though the season. Regardless of the outcome, they're always left hungry for next season.

Bring on the trophy

A new season and a new coaching staff did not mean starting over for the Lady Kingsmen track team who continued to dominate their conference and sectional. After an upsetting second place last year, the team left no doubt as to whether they would regain their NIC trophy, and emphasized the statement with their third sectional title. Successful throughout the season, the Kingsmen sent nine of their teammates down to the IHSAA state track meet in Bloomington. However, after losing precious conditioning time, the team knew that hard work was ahead, in order to catch up to the other teams who began training weeks earlier. "It's tough getting in shape," said sophomore Jackie Tachman, "But if it was easy, everyone would do it." After the graduation of their seniors, the Kingsmen lost key talent, but with the incoming freshmen, they were able to pick up where they left off and began training the next generation. "Track was amazing this year as a freshman. Everyone gives so much support and advice," said freshman M.J.. Doan. The season ended too soon for many of the girls, but they were left with the best hunger one can have. Next year there will be more sweat, more tears, and more champions. That is the Kingsmen way.

On a hot Sunday, June 10, Will Landrum arrived at the Joyce Center at Notre Dame.

Victoria Johnson beamed as she wore a traditional lei after the ceremony.

"V" is for graduating twins Andy and Peter Vavul and Blake and Zach VanDeVoorde.

Upon returning to his seat after walking across the stage, Casey Richards examined his diploma to ensure its accuracy.

In their speeches, five of the nine valedictorians, Janice Rottenberg, Miel Sundararajan, Jenny DeVito, Deborah Wei and Peggy Chang, gave the advice listed in the headline.

"Imagine a line," Mengwen Zhang said, "and cross it. It's only impossible if you don't try."

Stacie Reske waited during practice, which took place from 11:30 a.m. to 1:50 p.m., when graduates entered the other dome of the Joyce.

Black-and-white photos do not do justice to Brittnie Rigsby's blazing red hair. She led her row out during the recessional.

"Never be satisfied," valedictorian Gauthan said "Expect greatness. Quoting Bob Marley he said, "Open you eyes." Mengwer Zhang followed Vaidyanathan, who spoke fifth.

Valedictorians urge graduates to "Find something you love and care about"; "Rejoice and embark together"; "Experience" and "Appreciate life" and "Take challenges"

Surrounded by family and friends, Timothy Sione Vailea Vakalahi and Christopher Paea Kauhega wore beribboned leis, fragrant with orchids (and dollar bills!).

Deans David Hall and Shannan Lindzy hug family members of Clark Goerke, who accepted a diploma in his memory. Clark died the summer before his sophomore Suzie Stevenson was the accompanist for Chamber Choir, and played during "I Wish You Well, My Friend." Lyndsey Tschetter and David Coleman were soloists.

Salutatorians Christine Cummings and Rebecca Reising were both active recyclers, collecting pounds of paper during their years at Penn.

In her valedictory address, Ruby Parikh spoke of wave particles, the duality of light, and our perceptions of the universe. In his speech, David Bretz encouraged graduates to stay open minded, for the "power of a single question is infinite."

"We see farther upon the shoulders of giants," Miel Sundararajan stated.

Justin Donica passed the time during practice while wearing earrings with beetles encased in them.

They're not twins, but Scott Verduin and John Winn both have similar world views.

Sculpture teacher Beth McKechnie sat with Mike Zuidema, who was the last senior to walk across the stage at about 4:25 p.m., two and one half hours after commencement began. Kaleb Zimmerman was next to last.

ROBERT

Robert, Congratulations on completing the long road from Madison Elementary through Penn High School. You have become a fine young man in everything you have done. Making lifelong friendships, achieving goals you never thought possible, excelling and winning at the many sports you have played, hockey, football, track, wrestling, basketball and not to forget Madison summer softball. Beating the odds and overcoming physical limitations that were thrown your way. With your upbeat, optimistic outlook, great sense of humor, strength, kindness, and consideration of others, you will go far in life. We are proud of you and wish you great success now and forever.

Love Mom, Dad and Max

Go, Penn Soccer!

Marissa Ribot, senior, played the part of a psychiatrist while she displayed her senior work. Ribot titled her concentration "And, how does that make you feel?" The winner of Penn's visual communication award, Ribot plans on attending Illinois Institute of Art in Schaumburg so she can continue her education in graphic design.

Junior Greg Trybula's keen eye helped him create his concentration which was titled "Eye Appt." Trybula is one of six males who took Thom Andreae's AP Studio Art class. Trybula said, "No one really notices how unbalanced it is. We just have a lot of fun, get our work done, and express ourselves through art."

Sam Banacka, senior, has already begun his career in graphic design as he has been free lancing throughout the past year. His display titled "Punk Rock Show" included a variety of pieces created through PhotoShop, a graphic design program Banacka has been using since he was eight years old.

Junior Seher Chowhan shared her work with Penn's superintendent Dr. Jerry Thacker and his wife Donna. Chowhan is not sure how she will incorporate art into her future, but she hopes it will always be a part of her life.

Of her exhibition, "Shoe Fetish.," senior Megan Werling said, "I own at least 30 pairs of shoes!" Classmates agreed she picked the right concentration. Her self portrait mimics Gustav Klimt.

More than just a game...

Concentration

Lavon Oke, orchestra teacher, enjoyed an evening out with his three sons as he viewed a former electronic music student's art work. Oke talked with senior Tylene Graham about her "Urban Art" theme. Graham was Oke's student assistant as well for a second year.

Tiffany Lim, junior, took a moment to take in all her hard work. Fellow AP student Bridget Dix said, "Tiff is the most talented free drawer at Penn. She's like amazing."

Senior Bridget Dix started loving art as a kid when she would use her Beanie Babies as subjects to draw and paint. Dix, who plans to study graphic design at Bethel College, titled her AP exhibition "Look Closer." She was almost lost among the polka-dots.

Senior Lauren Fezy titled the culmination of her work "Peace of Mind." Her art centered around her memories of childhood days spent on her grandpa's farm.

Junior Katie Fisher has been seriously pursuing art for six years. She said, "I love art because it allows me to create my own ideas." Fisher's concentration was entitled "Eve's Delight" and focused on sinfully good indulgences of life.

Junior Annie Sauer sang the song "We Shall Overcome" and got the crowd ready to rock 'n' roll. While Sauer sang, many students started to sing along with her which created a special experience for Sauer. The song was often sung at protest demonstrations during the Civil Rights movement.

Junior Brittney Rhodes participated in Pennstock by blowing bubbles in the field. Rhodes commented on the day, "A sunny day isn't cool without bubbles!"

Juniors Malory Pecina, Jeni Gregory, and Rachel Malin made an interesting twist to their booth; it was inside a van. The girls decorated the van with signs, streamers, and flowers that supported the environment.

There were many psychedelic booths at Pennstock each with different things to offer such as face painting, food, games, and informative pamphlets. It was a neat experience to relive the '60s.

A blast from the past

Pennstock

Juniors spent two days outside reliving the '60s and experiencing life decades ago

Juniors Natalie Minnix, Erin Crawford, and Sarah Strachan lip synced at their Pennstock performance. The three girls made up choreography to go along with the music and entertained the audience.

Juniors Katrina Cichovacki, Jacob Denning and Robert Balliet took a rest in the grace from watching the bands and speakers perform. Cichovacki said, "Pennstock was such a fun way to learn and interact with your peers. I loved it."

Juniors Lindsey Jensen and Elizabeth Snow clapped and sang along to one of the many bands performing at Pennstock. Along with musical performances, students gave speeches about women's rights and environmental issues.

Junior Erin Edinborough and US History teacher Sarah Hickle (with son, Jonathan) visit the booths. Hickle commented, "Pennstock was a great success this year! We had beautiful weather and the students did a great job!"

Juniors Mimi Chan and Elissa Gennicks built a tent on the Pennstock field and fought for anti Vietnam war and anti draft. Gennicks said, "Our tent was put up because that's what people at Woodstock in the '60s did; they stayed the night and slept in tents."

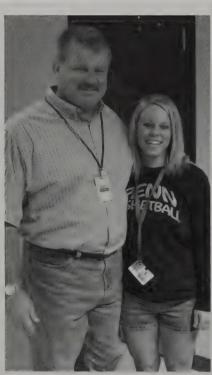

A sense of awkwardness is what the Sauer family felt at first when they all were located at Penn. "It really is a different atmosphere, and I have to restrain myself more," said junior Annie. However, English teacher Jim now has a different perspective: "I thought it would be weird seeing my family in the hallways, but it quickly became second nature." Senior Emily is on the left.

Sara Dalke and her mother Belinda, freshmen biology teacher, have a close relationship because of being in the same environment for four years. "It's nice because I can keep up with what's going on her life, like with her teachers and friends," said Mrs. Dalke.

school is like deja vu. "When I went to school my being together in school was a bonding experience and a good way

For Cory Yeoman, having his daughter, Erin, at The Lenig family (Mel, Kris, Anna and Nate) in unison agreed that Sally Dikos feels comforted to know that her son Garrick and he husband Greg are in the same building as she: "Garrick is ver independent but it's nice to know we are close if he needs us." Jane Smith and her mother JoLynn Brown embrace during a POW meeting Smith said, "having a parent at school is great for getting permissio slips signed and lunch money."

A Family That Learns

Together, Stays Together!

Freshman Lauren Rice believes that having her mother, Amy, teach at Penn caused them to have a closer relationship. "I love visiting my mom and having lunch with her because it is so much fun," said Lauren.

There are no secrets between the great relationship of mother and daughter Bonnie and Johanna Manningham, freshman. "It's really nice to have my mom here, because when you are having a bad day you know there is someone there to support you," said Johanna. Almost a dozen freshmen have teacher parents.

Elizabeth and Brian McKenzie believed that having their mother, Laura, teach at Penn is nice, because they get a free ride to school. Rhea Trowbridge and her son, Ryne, have a great relationship but it will truly be tested when he is in her class next year. "It's really nice to have him here, because I can help him out and keep an eye for him," said Trowbridge. Abby Walton is amazed at how close her relationship with her mother, Patti, is. "Every time Teachers and their Children I try to talk to my mom about something that happened in school somehow she knows, and I don't know how she knows!" said Abby.

Catherine and Johanna Gregory love seeing a familiar face in hallway. "Even though she may interrupt my class at times, I always love to see Catherine at school. She finally says 'hi' to me in the hall," said Gregory (not pictured is brother Chris). Other Kingsmen families include: Tom and Katie Csenar; Steve and Mae Hope; Dawn and Cory Bernaert; Brent and Sarah Holaway; Ree and Lauren Johnson; Tom, Amanda, and Shelby Miller; Becky and Robbie Brown; and Doug and Chris Chaffee.

The landscape management class laid sod at the building trades house the week before the house was to be put on the market. Seniors David Coleman, Kathryn Banas, Natalie MacRae, and Heidi Treacy enjoyed an evening of laughter at the Senior Luau. Kate Ripley, junior, paddled a kayak on the St. Joseph river.

Alli Folk, sophomore, was dipped by partner Adam Binder, junior, during a salsa lesson for Cinco de Mayo in Kristen Riggs' Spanish class. Senior Adam Gadson enjoyed an evening of salsa with POW, Penn's Organization of Women. Gadson was one of two boys who attended the lesson. Charlie Olson and Bob Lawton took a break while helping place sod for the building trades house. The spring choral concert included a song that imitated a Coca-Cola commercial. Senior Ali Beaudway, Cherise Richards, junior, and senior Lisa Larkin proudly displayed their tasty billiard table: Kit Kat rails, Oreo pockets, and gumballs.

Paige Rassi, junior Kassi Beamer, senior

Aubrey Wakefield, senior Jason Harker, sophomore

If These Halls Could Talk

our high school hallways will always remain in our hearts.

As we put a closing to a great year at Pe in High School, we remember the fond memories we had in these halls at Penn. We remember the friends hips we have made, the demanding papers we have worked so har on, and the fun spirit days. Many of the students will return the following year, but our fellow seniors will close the doors to their high school careers forever. However, they will be faced with new hallways that lead them to different directions they may take in life. Hallways are the pathways to success in life. The guide us to our destination and goals in life, but along the way they present great obstacles and friendships High school is a time where we sculpt our personality and character. Without our peers and teachers from Penn High School we wouldn't be the same. The hallways of life will come and go, but the secrets within Hard work and dedication certainly paid off for these contestants in the Scholastic Art Awards. Senior Bridget Dix, silver medal winner, said 'If you have any interest in art definitely pursue this competition."

Tina Boehm, a foreign exchange student, experienced the city life America in Chicago. "Being a part of this American high school experien has been difficult because of the size and studies of each class, but ove it has been fun!'

Evan Craker, senior, sang to Natalie MacRae, in the musical Oklahoma! "I am the only four-year member in this year's musical. It is a very intense feeling of self fulfillment, berole," said Craker.

Debate state finalists Janice lottenberg and Deborah Wei, seiors, took a break from debate to elped our friendship, and it's great have her as my debate partner.

"I love playing catcher, because I am the leader of the team," said freshmen Chloe Donati. Donati was the starting catcher for the junior varsity team.

Caitlin Shober embraced her hero, policeman Brian Cook, that saved her in a car accident. "That day I just knew God was riding shotgun and Brian Cook was my angel who saved my life," she commented. Mike Shidler, an exceptional musician, agreed that music really has influenced his life, "Music rocks; 'nuff said," Shidler claimed. Junior Steve Sorenson had a similar experience with track. "I have been running the 800 and mile events for three years," he said, which has benefited his high school career in a positive way.

Meghan Cregier, a member of the 4x4 event on the girls' track team, shed light the positive aspects of the team. "Our team is more like a family. My group even practices on Sunday, that's how close we are," she said. Mike Reed and Cera Tychonievich showed their school spirit and team pride on Cowboy day during spirit week. "Toga day was the best spirit day because I wore a toga that showed so much Penn pride that I rubbed it in Mishawaka's faces," said Reed.

You cannot help but learn more as you take the world into your hands. Take it up reverently, for it is an old piece of clay, with millions of thumbprints on it.

Stories have been told, notes passed, tears shed, and memories made. Just as we were complaining that the year would never end, it snuck out the back door. During the school year the yearbook staff scoured the halls in search for the scoop of 2006-2007, and so we have preserved these stories for you. The halls have taught us that it is not just about the games we won or the trophies we took home, but the hours spent practicing for the game and the countless practice tests to prepare for academic competitions. We remember the big things, but the halls have stood patiently remembering the little things that we forget are so important to who we are. Our halls are rich with dreams and fears and hopes and they will stand as a reminder for all that we have been and the stepping stone for what we will become. These halls hold the stories of us waiting in line for French fries at lunch (and all the conversations that passed the time), pulling out of the parking lot after a late night of practice, running to catch the bus. and eating Chinese in 154. As the seniors finish their time at Penn it is hard to say good-bye and the underclassmen are grateful to be moving forward, but no matter where we go from here Penn's halls will be filled with our stories. The yearbook is our gift to you so that twenty years from now you can still remember the stories of these halls.

Jim Schmidt, geography teacher, agreed to have his beard shaved if his freshmen raised $500 to aid in the Darfur crisis. The students and faculty and staff (led by Brenda Hab) went above and beyond raising $1,512.44 and Schmidt accepted the check after he was clean shaven. Kevin Smith, freshman, rode a bicycle during class as a reward. Smith not only en yed riding bikes, but also learning anything he could about police officers. The children's play actors and crew celebrated with a meal at teak N Shake after a performance. The Little Mermaid was an opportunity for Penn's theater group to put on a show to entertain younger audinces. Penn's Organization of Women, POW delivered 1500 personalized notes to each female at Penn in honor of International Women's Day on March 8th, Over a three week period, POW members and several female faculty spent 50 hours writing out the notes. The girls grouped for a quick picture before they set out to deliver. In chemistry class junior Emily Gooch roasted a marshmallow to charred perfection.
